France Ready To Halt Nazi Fortification Of Rhineland

Blum to Serve Notice on League 'Stern Steps' Will Be Taken.

Expected to Force Issue on June 16

By the United Press.

Paris, May 25.—Leon Blum, popular front leader and next premier, will serve notice on the League of Nations June 16 that France will take "vigorous measures" to prevent German fortification of the Rhineland, the United Press was informed tonight.

The informant declined to reveal what steps are envisaged by the "vigorous measures," but admitted that so far Germany has defied everything except armed might.

Blum will reveal France's determination to the League Council when he makes his debut at the international round table.

Although an Italo-Ethiopian settlement and anti-Italian sanctions are the foremost League problems, France is more deeply concerned with German remilitarization of the dangerous strip along her northeastern frontier, and is expected to force the issue.

Fortification in Progress.

Fears that the French army is being bottled up and soon would be unable to fulfill treaty obligations with the Little Entente and Russia in event of an emergency, were increased today by press reports that German fortification of the Rhineland already is in progress.

Officials fear France may be confronted with an accomplished fact unless she takes appropriate steps.

The German language newspaper Elasser of Strasbourg reported that 150,000 laborers, working at top speed, are employed on the German Rhineland fortification project and that the job will be completed much more rapidly than was France's $100,000,000 Maginot line.

The newspaper said the German fortification system will comprise two lines, the principal part of which will extend from Eifel to Hunsbrueck, joining the Black Forest system.

Quadrangle Defense.

The military strategy of the system, according to Elasser, is to hold any French army attempting to penetrate into Germany in a quadrangle, formed by fortifications at Trier, Coblenz, Maine and Karlsruhe.

The newspaper said one of the strongest links in the German chain will be built at the junction of the Saar and Moselle rivers in order to counterbalance the French system in the Thionville district.

Echo de Paris reported that the old Istein system, which Germany was forced to destroy in conformance with the Versailles Treaty, has been rearmed with large-caliber guns.

Russia Issues Law To Curb Divorces

Moscow, May 25 (AP).—An end of the easy divorce system in Russia and creation of new, strict family responsibilities were foreshadowed in the project of a law issued tonight for public approval.

The project will reduce divorces by the simple expedient of putting them beyond the purse of the average person. Divorced or separated parents will have to pay up to 60 per cent of their incomes for the support of their children.

Women who submit to operations to prevent childbirth will be fined and held up to public rebuke, and doctors performing such operations will be punished by imprisonment.

Glorifying the family, the project commits the government to an agreement to pay large premiums for the birth of all children after the seventh.

First Nun Accepted by Supreme Court

Robed Dominicans See Nun Take Oath in Supreme Court

The Supreme Court of the United States took on the aspect of a religious gathering at its session yesterday when 25 nuns sat quietly in the red-cushioned seats or peered through the grilled gates, watching one of their number take the oath which gives her the right to practice law before the highest tribunal in the land.

Thirty-four-year-old Sister Ann Joachim, a smiling, be-spectacled young woman, was the center of attraction not only for the black-robed nuns. Many persons who sat through the reading of numerous and lengthy opinions by the justices had come only to see the young Dominican from Detroit appear before the bar.

She is the first nun ever to be admitted to practice before the Supreme Court. But now that she has won the honor she has no intention of putting it to use. Eight years ago she quit active law practice to enter the Dominican Convent at Adrian, Mich.

Typewriter Co., Closing Plant, Defies Strikers

Remington Rand to Shift 25 Pct. of Trade Abroad; 5,000 Walk Out.

New oYrk, May 26 (Tuesday).—James H. Rand, jr., president of Remington Rand, Inc., announced early today that because of strikes called at six plants of the company it would close its Syracuse (N. Y.) operations permanently and "at all costs" would keep other factories operating in defiance of the strikers.

Rand said he had ordered personnel of plants in London, England, and Hamilton, Ontario, doubled immediately to shift to foreign production all manufacture for foreign sales constituting 25 per cent of Remington Rand's entire business in typewriters, cabinets and adding machines.

Calling of a strike at Syracuse, he said, led him to withdraw an offer made earlier to Mayor Rolland Marvin, of Syracuse, to keep part of the plant there "if the city got rid of 16 radicals who were making all this trouble."

Marvin was en route to syracuse after a conference here with Rand when the latter announced his decision.

Rand said about 4,200 employes would be involved in the strike if all at the plants named by union leaders walked out.

Citing polls conducted in recent weeks, Rand said:

"We know that less than 10 per cent of our employes want to strike. We intend to go right ahead and keep open at all costs. Less than 25 per cent belong to the union and these are trying to rule all the others by coercion and intimidation. For those of our workers who wish to work, we are going to obtain the constitutional protection of their rights."

4 CCC Men Die In Forest Fires; 12 Are Missing

Six Others Are Injured; 1,500 Fighting Blaze in New Jersey.

By the United Press.

Barnegat, N. J., May 25.—Forest fires, raging over a huge area in Burlington and Ocean counties, tonight claimed the lives of four CCC workers and caused the injuries to six others.

They were part of a group of 50 from the F-55 Corps of Bass River, who were trapped between a backfire and a raging blaze at Stafford Forge near Manahawkin. Twelve other youths still are missing.

The four bodies, burned almost beyond recognition, and the injured youths were found about 300 feet from a truck which had been used to carry them there to help fight the fire.

Neither the four victims nor the injured, who weer taken to Paul Kimball Hospital at Lakewood, were idetnified.

A similar incident occurred at Sims' place, where 23 volunteer fire fighters were caught between two fires. They escaped, however, by crawling on their hands and knees for more than a mile before they reached safety on a dirt road.

The three separate fires have consumed at least ten homes and many summer camps. Early estimates placed the damage at $100,000.

Division Fire Warden Peter Crozer, in charge of the ground crews at Warren Grove, collapsed from sheer exhaustion. He had been on constant duty since Saturday night, when the first fire broke out at Jones Mills, Burlington County.

Approximately 1,500 firemen, including 500 CCC workers were in the field tonight, fighting the blaze on three fronts.

Brookings Speakers Are Good, But the Chicken Is Even Better

Men have long laughed at the dinner meetings of women's organizations, declaring that more attention is paid to the color of the nutcups and the design of the placecards than to such important features as committee reports and speeches.

Women have long suspected that the so-called dominant sex could be just as easily distracted from the speeches at their own meetings. Now they're sure of it.

It wasn't nutcups that betrayed the men. It wasn't place-cards. It was old-fashioned fried chicken, cooked to exquisite succulence, and then served with a couple of high-sounding but hard-to-digest addresses.

"Current Trends and Problems in Social Science Research" was the title of one. The other, just as formidable, was "Research and the Formulation of Government Policy."

They were dished up along with the chicken at the Brookings Institution following the annual meeting of the board of trustees.

But instead of looking up the two speakers, Dr. Robert T. Crane and Joseph Eastman, after the meeting and asking them for a few additional facts on the subject of research, most of the trustees and even some of the special guests went hunting for the institution's housekeeper. They wanted that chicken recipe.

Mrs. Edith M. Birks, who had made the hit of the evening with the dinner she had planned, finally entrusted one of the trustees with the secret, explaining she had "just stumbled on to that way of cooking it."

For the benefit of all Post readers as well as those who attended the Brookings Institution dinner and then failed in their search for Mrs. Birks, the recipe is given here.

Black Legion Rise Checked By Outrages

Two Additional Deaths Linked to Michigan Terrorist Group.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Detroit, May 25.—An apparent revival of the Ku Klux Klan, under the name of the Black Legion, but with hoods, robes and other accoutrements of the older order, seemed well on the way to dismal failure here tonight.

The full glare of publicity that was turned on the Black Legion with the disclosure that apparently some of its members had been involved in at least one brutal murder was believed by investigators to have nipped in the bud attempts to form a national organization by leaders who in some instances dreamed of a military dictatorship for the United States.

It was disclosed in well informed sources that there was no possibility of a check-up on claims of some members to an enrollment of 135,000 in the order in the State of Michigan, but that the number doubtless was much exaggerated. It also was believed unfavorable reaction to the organization as the result of tories of brutalities had brought it into disrepute.

An influx of workmen from other sections of the country and their consequent banding together as chapters of an organization seemingly founded elsewhere some years ago was believed the origin of the Black Legion in Michigan. In many towns and in the smaller cities it attained substantial proportions and lately had experienced some growth in Detroit.

All connected with the movement were eager to achieve publicity and talked freely when questioned by the authorities after the slaying of Charles A. Poole, whose death was attributed to the order. Prompt action by authorities in exposing the organization, however, and the reaction to brutalities have caused officials to believe that its growth has been checked and that it will not figure much longer as a formidable organization.

Aid of U. S. Sought.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 25.—Investigations of the Black Legion multiplied today as victims of mob terrorism came forward under promise of protection with new accounts of slayings, floggings and arson by masked night riders wearing the death's head insignia of the secret order.

Charges that the outlawed brotherhood, which one investigator declared has an armed membership of 135,000 in Michigan alone, sought political dominance through scourge and pistol, brought official inquiries in two large Michigan cities.

In another a grand jury sifted evidence in a reported death by flogging, and in Detroit Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea asked the Department of Justice for aid in a fight "to uproot and destroy" the hooded organization, whose members, he said, "once initiated, can never resign."

Some members were reported to have told investigators the society's ultimate aim was a United States dictatorship.

Thirteen members of the terrorist society were arraigned here today on charges of kidnaping and murder in the "ritual execution" of Charles A. Poole, whose death in a lonely roadside ditch brought to light the existence of the blood-banded fraternity.

Dayton Dean, city employe, who has confessed he emptied two revolvers into Poole's kneeling body May 13, made a new statement today, John I. Navarre, head of the Detroit homicide squad, announced, in which he said the slayers had planned to hang the young WPA worker rather than shoot him to death.

"It was a one-way ride; we all knew that," Dean was quoted by Navarre and Assistant Prosecutor John A. Ricca, as saying. "We wanted it to be a necktie party with the robes and regalia, but when some of the cars got lost—the ones with the robes and robes in them—we got tired waiting, so I shot him. We wanted it to be a necktie party to be more impressive."

Developments of the day included:

1. A grand jury investigation at Jackson into the death of Paul Every, whose widow charges he was

6 Killed in Quebec As Plane Crashes

Amos, Quebec, May 25 (AP).—Six persons were killed in the crash of a General Airways plane near Chibougamau Lake yesterday, it was learned tonight.

The victims include W. H. Clarke, pilot; Georges Millhan, mechanic, and four passengers. One of these, said information from Rouyn, Quebec, was Leo Springer, prominent Canadian mining man and head of Ceres Explorations Limited.

Pilot Gath Edwards, sent out to search for the plane when it was unreported, discovered the wreckage about half a mile from Lake Chibougamau and about 100 miles from Amos.

It was understood the three unidentified dead were prospectors picked up at Father Lake and Presqu'isle Lake by Springer's party, which was inspecting mining properties.

Arabs Defeat British Force; Revolt Grows

Riots Reach Proportions of a Revolution in Holy Land.

Italian Stations Charged With Broadcasting Propaganda.

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, (Tuesday), May 26.—British police fought Arabs in a long gun battle at the foot of Mount Tabor, near Nazareth, and were forced to retire early this morning when their ammunition ran out as the Arabs advanced.

The police beat a strategic retreat when they sighted some 250 of their opponents armed with rifles bearing down upon their front and flanks.

In a sharp clash at Meskha, also near Nazareth, soldiers and police repelled about 200 Arabs with undetermined casualties. . . . . .

After 40 days of guerrilla warfare by Arabs against Jews and government forces, there was a growing conviction among many observers today that Palestine is undergoing a major, well-organized rebellion rather than simple anti-Jewish disorders.

Despite the strongest concentration of armed forces in the Holy Land since the World War, comprising more than 3,000 soldiers, daring depredations are continuing.

Propaganda Laid to Italy.

Arrests of more than 600 persons, drastic curfew regulations in almost every important city in Palestine, virtual marial law on the roads of central and southern Palestine have also failed to curb the marauders.

Meanwhile, a charge thot anti-British propaganda is being circulater among inhabitants of Palestine and India from Italian radio broadcasting stations was made in the British House of Commons.

Commander O. Locker-Lampson, in making the charge, asked the government to make representations to the Italian government.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the commander that the situation was being carefully watched and that representations recently were made to Italy regarding anti-British broadcasts from Italian stations.

5 Killed in Holy Land.

Jerusalem, May 25 (U.P.).—At least five persons were killed and an unknown number wounded today when guerilla warfare broke out all over Palestine. The outbreak climaxed two months of bloody rioting between Jews and Arabs in which nearly 50 have been killed.

Bombings and shootings continued throughout the day despite the government's emergency measures, which are tantamount to martial law.

British forces, with orders to restore normality at all costs, discovered large quantities of explosives and ammunition in Arab homes at Jaffa.

Bomb Throwing Starts Search.

Several Jewish passenger buses reportedly were ambushed by armed Arabs outside Jerusalem. Government forces, rushed from the city to escort the buses to Jerusalem, also were said to have been attacked.

Telephone service was disrupted when rioters tore down the wires.

Arabs, in rowboats reportedly bombed and fired at Jewish merchant vessels arriving at Tel Aviv. Unconfirmed reports said they rowed alongside the vessel and tossed incendiary bombs aboard.

Armored cars, equipped with machine guns, sped to Rison Nurshems, North Palestine, to repel an Arab mob which reportedly was attempting to release prisoners from the local jail.

Two Arabs were killed at Nablus and four wounded in a sharp exchange with police and troops. The Arabs had barricaded themselves in a building in defiance of the rigid curfew law imposed several weeks ago. Government forces removed the obstructions and routed them. No casualties were announced. A young Arab girl was killed at Kafkenna, in the northern district, when police fired at a group of women perched atop houses and throwing stones and jagged pieces of pavement at the police. A British constable was injured.

Communism and Other Fearful Names Are Called as Townsend Inquiry Reaches Defiance and Statement Stage.

The controversy between Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, and the House committee investigating pension plans reached the stage yesterday where each side was issuing "dares" to the other.

In fact, it had gone so far that each side was calling the other "Communist."

But up to last night no blows, legal or otherwise, had been struck and not a chip had been knocked off a shoulder.

The committee still was in a state of nervous indecision as to how to go about citing the doctor for contempt of the House as a result of his "taking a walk" from a hearing at which he was being questioned, and his subsequent statement of defiance.

Replying to what one committee member called Townsend's numerous "bids for martyrdom," James R. Sullivan, counsel for the committee, issued this resounding challenge:

"I dare and challenge Dr. Townsend to appear and offer himself as a witness.

Townsend had said previously:

"I will rot in jail before I will appear before that committee."

Sullivan continued:

"If he returns for questioning he will be confronted with such documentary proof, which he can not deny, that his fantastic stories of the past will not stand."

Then Sullivan got down to the real issue. He accused Townsend of being an agent of Soviet Russia, no less.

Said Sullivan:

"It has been charged by Dr. Townsend that the investigating committee has used communistic tactics. In answer to that statement I wish to state that if Dr. Townsend returns as a witness it will be positively shown that the Prosperity Publishing Co., which he controls, has advertised through its paper, Townsend Weekly, the communistic doctrine of Soviet Russia and has carried advertising matter offering for sale magazines advocating Communism."

IS THAT SO?

YES, THAT'S SO!

Sullivan's statement covered three typewritten pages. He charged that Townsend wanted to become a "martyr" so that he would raise a defense fund, and that the doctor wished to use a trial before the House as a "sounding board."

Deception Charged.

Then he charged that Townsend had deceived the income tax collector.

"The evidence will show," said Sullivan, "the deception Dr. Townsend took advantage of in his Federal income tax return when he set out $6,941.50 had been paid from the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., to his wife, not an employe of that organization. This was done to mislead the public and his contributors into thinking Dr. Townsend received only $6,950 and expenses for his share. He has con-

Senators Scan Small Incomes For Tax Boosts

'Little Fellows' Likely to Be Affected; Relief Adds to Problems.

By Robert C. Albright.

Possibility that the Senate may dip into low-income pocketbooks in its frantic search for new revenue was revived yesterday in a fagging Finance Committee, as sharp prods toward adjournment failed to budge the tightly wedged tax and relief bills from Senate committee reefs.

Shy many millions of the tax goal set by the President, the Finance Committee renewed its quarrel with the Treasury over alleged "low" estimates, but cast sidelong glances at increased taxes and lowered exemptions in the small income brackets, rejected previously.

Progress toward adjournment was not furthered by failure of the Senate Appropriations sub-committee to reach agreement on changes in the $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation passed by the House, and a call for new data from Budget Director Daniel Bell and Comptroller General J. R. McCarl.

Senate leaders still strove for a June get-away, but drew little encouragement from committees considering the two pivotal bills. Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson hopes to get the key relief measure before the Senate tomorrow or Thursday and will hold the chamber in session "day and night" in an effort to speed the program. But many of his colleagues were skeptically eyeing the June 6 deadline.

Treasury experts yesterday were called bluntly to task by Senator

30,000 in U. S. Navy Initiated In Record Equator-Crossing

The largest "crossing-the-Equator" initiation in naval history, involving almost 30,000 officers and enlisted men attached to the United States fleet, was reported yesterday by the Navy Department.

The initiation took place as part of the fleet's "war game" maneuvers around the Panama Canal and the Galapagos Islands.

So old are the "crossing-the-line" ceremonies that their origin has been lost in the mists of time, but they have been part of sea lore at least since the days of the early Vikings.

Whenever a ship crosses the Equator, tradition demands that Father Neptune and Davy Jones climb aboard the vessel and take over. The shellback members of the crew—those who have been over the line before—proceed to haze their "pollywog" shipmates—those who have spent their seafaring days north of the Equator.

In the days when "ships of wood were commanded by men of steel" rough-house initiations were the custom. Today initiations are milder, usually taking the form of paddling, shocking the "pollywogs" with electric "devils," giving them a soaking in the sea, or shaving their heads. Some "pollywogs" have been known to "buy off" their initiation by paying for beers for the entire crew.

In the wireless message announcing that 29,751 pollywogs attached to the fleet had been initiated as shellbacks, the methods of the initiation were not described.

Each new shellback will be awarded a diploma bearing the seal and signature of Neptunus Rex, Ruler of the Raging Main, and His Majesty's Scribe, Davy Jones. The diploma also bears the seal of the Navy Department and the commanding officer of the ship on which the "pollywog" crossed the line.

Cash Is Sought From U. S. Aids By Democrats

'High-Pressure' Methods of Convention Book Sale Irk Some.

Government employes in Washington are receiving from the Democratic National Committee letters, followed by "hurry-up" phone calls, asking for "contributions" of $2.50 "or more" each in exchange for copies of the Democratic Convention Book of 1936, it was revealed yesterday.

The first copies of letters signed by W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, were received by Federal workers yesterday, and recipients were reported to have received, later in the day, telephone calls asking whether the letters had been received and how soon the "contributions" could be expected.

The need for quick action in responding to the plea was emphasized in the phone calls.

The letter states that the object is to build up a "substantial war chest" with which to enter the campaign.

In political circles it was reported the committee hopes to receive $1,000,000 for the campaign fund in proceeds from the convention book.

Some recipients of the letters were reported to be resentful of the "high pressure" sales methods employed.

Officials pointed out that under the law employes are at liberty to contribute if they wish, but no coercion may be applied.

The letter reads:

"We feel sure you are contemplating sending a contribution to the Democratic National committee and helping in every way possible toward the re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Enclosed is broadcast giving you a fair idea of the magnificent Democartic Convention Book of 1936. This is by far the most elaborate

Woman Identified In Mountain Death

Keene, N. H., May 25 (AP).—County Solicitor Arthur Olson announced tonight the woman slain atop lonely Mount Wantastiquet had been identified as Mrs. Elizabeth Freel, 50 wife of Robert E. Freel, of Clinton, Mass.

Identification was made, Olson said, by the woman's husband, who is manager of the Clinton Gas & Electric Co., Dr. Harry C. Duprey, a Clinton dentist, and chief of police Michael E. Kelley, of Clinton. Olson said Mrs. Freel, who was known to be eccentric, disappeared from home May 15.

Police continued search for an elderly man who, Olson said, was seen in White River Junction, Vt., in the company of a woman believed to have been Mrs. Freel.

HighestCourt Ruling Voids Muncipality Bankrupt Act

Another New Deal Law Held Unconstitutional by Supreme Body.

Verdict Is 5 to 4 Against Defaults

Scores of Districts In U. S. Are Affected by Opinion.

By Felix Bruner.

In a five-to-four decision, the Supreme Court yesterday declared unconstitutional another New Deal law, the municipal bankruptcy act. The majority of the court held that the law violated the rights of the States, an argument on which most of the long series of decisions invalidating New Deal legislation have been based.

The law provided that cities, towns and other political subdivisions might go into Federal courts and reduce their indebtedness. The ruling affected scores of small municipalities, water districts and drainage and sanitary districts. A recent report of the Securities Exchange Commission showed that 46 such governmental units were seeking to reduce their obligations under the law.

The majority opinion, read by Justice McReynolds, was concurred in by Justices Roberts, VanDevanter, Butler and Sutherland. The dissenting opinion by Justice Cardozo was concurred in by Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone and Brandeis.

Decision Reversed.

The majority reversed a decision of the Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit in a case involving the Cameron County (Texas) Water Improvement District.

The majority held that application of the law "might materially restrict respondent's (the water district) control over its fiscal affairs."

"If Federal bankruptcy laws can be extended to respondent, why not the State?" McReynolds asked. "If voluntary proceedings may be permitted, so many involuntary ones, subject, of course, to any inhibition of the eleventh amendment. * * *

"If obligations of States or their political subdivisions may be subjected to the interference here attempted, they are no longer free to manage their own affairs; the will of Congress prevails over them; although inhibited, the right to tax might be less sinister. And really the sovereignty of the State, so often declared necessary to the Federal system, does not exist.

"The Constitution was careful to provide that 'no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts.' This she may not do under the form of a bankruptcy act or otherwise. Nor do we think she can accomplish the same end by granting any permission necessary to enable Congress to do so. * * *

"The sovereignty of the State essential to its proper functioning under the Federal Constitution can not be surrendered; it can not be taken away by any form of legislation."

2,019 in Default.

In his dissenting opinion, Justice Cardozo said that in January, 1934, a total of 2,019 municipalities, counties and other governmental units were known to be in default. He said that the units were in 41 of the 48 States.

"The plight of the debtors was bad enough; that of the creditors was even worse. It is possible that in some instances the bonds did not charge the municipalities or other units with personal liability. Even when they did, however, execution could not issue against the property of the debtor held for public uses, and few of the debtors were owners of anything else. In such circumstances the only remedy was a mandamus whereby the debtor was commanded to tax and tax again.

"The command was mere futility when tax values were exhausted. Often the holders of the bonds to the extent of 90 per cent or more were ready to scale down the obligations and put the debtor on his feet. A recalcitrant minority had capacity to block the plan.. Nor was there hope for relief from statutes to be enacted by the States. The Constitution prohibits the States from passing any law that will impair the obligation of existing contracts, and a State insolvency act is of no avail as to obligations of the debtor incurred before its passage. Relief must come from Congress if it is to come from anyone."

Mother Better, Roosevelt Due In Washington

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 25.—Satisfied his 82-year-old mother is out of danger from her hip injury, President Roosevelt departed on his special train tonight to return to Washington and duties incident to the wind-up of Congress.

The President concluded his three-day stay at the family estate by talking Dutchess County politics with James Townsend, Democratic county chairman, and driving over his home grounds to Val Kill cottage, where some road improvements have been under way.

Townsend told reporters there was no mention in his talk with the executive of the gubernatorial situation arising out of Gov. Lehman's decision to retire.

"We simply talked over the county situation in a general way," he said. Dutchess County has been a Republican stronghold for years.

Because the President is extremely anxious that Lehman reconsider his decision not to seek a third term, political leaders thought he would take the opportunity while here to make a personal appeal to his Albany successor.

Summer White House officials said that as far as they knew there had not even been a phone call between the two.

Officials said the President came closer to "doing nothing" significant or important in his week-end sojourn here than during any of the numerous trips he has made to the Roosevelt homestead in years.

The return envelope inclosed is addressed to the Democratic National Committee, 217-18 Colorado Building, Washington, and in the lower left corner is the further direction, "D. C. Convention Book Division."

"Granitegrams" Out.

Republican campaign literature grew yesterday with publication of the first of a series of pamphlets entitled "Granitegrams" and described as discussing the New Deal in the "language of the layman."

At the same time, Representative Short (Republican), Missouri, said in a radio speech that the New Deal was inconsistent, questioned whether its leaders "have a clear conception" of what they are trying to do and took Postmaster General Farley to task for referring with what he called "eloquent disdain" to a "'typical prairie State'" in a recent address.

In addition, the Young Republican organization, through the current issue of its magazine, the Trumpeter, asserted "Democratic propagandists" were "setting up a verbal plant comparable to the one created in Russia in the revolution."

"Oversight" Pointed Out.

Another statement by John Hamilton, national organizer of the Landon-for-President committee, said no attention had been given by Landon headquarters to the selection of a Vice Presidential candidate.

The announcement of the Republican National Committee accompanying the first group of "Granitegrams," five in all, said "they take their name from the author, Mark Granite, of Newton, Pa., and in form are short talks on the Administration from the viewpoint of the proprietor of a country store," adding, "Mark Granite is a pen name."

In his address Representative short cited as what he called examples of inconsistency the recent increase in the tariff on cotton goods in contrast with what he called New Deal efforts to reduce tariffs under the reciprocal trade treaty program, and the expenditure of funds for reclamation projects despite efforts to take land out of agricultural production."

Democratic and Republican Ink-Slinging Proves a Boon to Printers.

By Franklyn Waltman

IRRESPECTIVE of the outcome, and whoever else may profit or lose in this year's Presidential campaign, it should prove a boom for the printers and lithographers. If those craftsmen have not yet come out of the red, it is almost certain they will before the Republican and Democratic National Committees and other political organizations are finished.

WALTMAN

Never before has there been such a flood of political pamphlets and brochures as this year—and the campaign really has not started. It would take a corps of statisticians to figure the tons of paper already covered with the charges, counter-charges, replies and defense of the various political organizations—and each seems to be doing about as well as the other.

The American Liberty League has kept up a running stream of pamphlets assailing the New Deal or reprinting speeches of those who do. Every other day or so there arrives a pamphlet from the Economists National Committee on Monetary Policy, assailing the unorthodox fiscal schemes of the Roosevelt Administration.

The Young Republican division of the Republican National Committee is publishing monthly a lavishly printed magazine called The Trumpeter, poking fun at New Deal foibles. The Republican National Committee itself several weeks ago issued the first copy of a rotogravure tabloid, entitled "On Our Way"—modeled along the lines of the magazine Ballyhoo—but that seems to have dropped by the wayside.

Offsetting this Republican "literature"—if that is not an abuse of the word—are Democratic Charles Michelson's weekly letter, "Disspelling the Fog," sent to more than 1,000 newspapers; a weekly tabloid entitled "The Roosevelt Record," published by a mysterious "Record Publishing Co., Inc," but under the eagle eye of Stanley High, the newest addition to the Roosevelt advisory board, and occasional pamphlets from the "Good Neighbor League," also under Mr. High's direction—and various other occasional documents.

In addition, the Democrats enjoy the facilities of the Government Printing Office—for in a campaign year every official document explaining the work of a department or agency is in effect a political document for the party in power, because only the best foot is put forward. And, of course, the Government Printing Office is rushed with the printing and reprinting of politically flavored speeches and insertions in the Congressional Record.

And this does not take into consideration the official, souvenir handbooks of the two political conventions. The Democrats are working late at night to get out a lavish—not to say luxurious—book, which will be sold to all Federal employes and all good Democrats at $2, or thereabouts, a copy. Chairman James A. Farley, it is understood, is expecting to add $1,000,000 or more to his campaign fund through this publication.

In addition to the fancy price, the handbook will be notable for its advertisements, sold at the rate of $2,000 a page. There are all sorts of rumors about this phase of the matter, it being contended that the advertising solicitors have been furnished with the names of all contractors and corporations doing business with the Federal Government—and that the suggestion has been made to such advertisers that the people with whom they deal are certain to be impressed by their advertisement in this handbook.

In this connection the question arises as to whether a contribution of $2,000 to the Democratic National Committee for a page advertisement is a legitimate advertising expense or a political contribution—if it is regarded as the latter, it would be illegal, since the corrupt practices act forbids corporations making political contributions.

It is understood that General Motors Corporation has taken at least one page in the handbook. Since this concern is owned in part by John J. Rascob and the duPonts—supporters of the American Liberty League—it might be difficult to prove that such payments are anything but legitimate advertising transactions. Surely the duPonts and Mr. Rascob would not make a political contribution to the Democrats.

* * *

Incidentally, the current issue of The Trumpeter, along with an article captioned "Watch Out, Mr. Wallace," reproduces a facsimile of a United States Treasury check, representing an AAA payment of $82,000 to a farmers' co-operative in North Dakota. The check does not appear to have much connection with the article. But since it is a violation of the law to reproduce obligations of the United States Treasury—including currency, stamps, bonds and checks—the article might be captioned: "Watch Out: Editors of The Trumpeter."

* * *

The newest publication to come from the Republican National Committee is a series of brochures called "Granitegrams," a title based on the nom de plume of the author, Mark Granite. The latter is supposed to be a rural philosopher of Bucks County, Pa., who expresses himself in the homely language of the man on the farm.

"You remember Rostand's rooster who claimed he made the sun rise. I have a rooster who goes further than that: he not only crows when the sun rises, the loudest of any rooster in Bucks County, but he even crows every time a hen lays an egg. I call him 'Roosevelt.' My hens are like the American people. When they try to get down to business, the rooster just struts around and pesters them. But if, in spite of him, they manage to lay a few eggs, he crows to beat the band."

A certain New Dealer here who hails from the vicinity of Bucks County contends that Mark Granite demonstrates that he does not know any more about the habits of poultry than he does about the American political situation.

Socialists Pick Thomas to Run For Presidency

New Yorker Is Nominated for 3d Time; Nelson His Running Mate.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 25.—For a third time, Norman Thomas was nominated today as the Socialist candidate for President.

Thomas, the party nominee in 1928 and 1932, was selected by an overwhelming voice vote. Against his choice, there were low cries of "no" from some members of right-wing delegations—evidencing the bitter week-end dispute over the New York controversy, which ended in the seating of the leftist Thomas delegation and the organization of a new party by the New York "Old Guard" after its delegation was turned down by the convention.

While there was no strenuous opposition to the draft of the platform committee, the presence of some objections and a minority report prompted reconsideration to smooth out the differences.

Hoan Nominates.

The nomination of Thomas was made by Dr. Harry W. Laiwler—co-director with the nominee of the League for Industrial Democracy—and by Mayor Daniel Webster Hoan, of Milwaukee. It was seconded by a dozen or more delegates.

Demonstrations, begun with the nomination, reached an uproarious climax when Thomas was escorted into the convention hall by Mayor Hoan.

The hall was a mass of red flags as delegates paraded about the aisles with the standards of their States. Thomas led the delegates in the singing of the "Internationale," with his right arm aloft and fist clenched, as he was carried on the shoulders of delegates from his home State to the platform for an informal acceptance speech of a few words.

He brought a long round of laughter when he declared:

"I am not some sudden apparition from a remote world, who has been hiding out for weeks and appears with surprise when he finds out he is the candidate. No, it is not like that in the Socialist Party.

"Our nominees are in the convention, helping their fellow delegates working out the problems of the party, working in the field with all the membership.

"And one thing more, I've not spent a cent for the nomination. That, again, is something peculiar to the nominees of our party."

Two other nominations, besides that of Nelson, were made for Vice President—Roy Burt, of Illinois, national organizer of the party, and Mary Donovan Hapgood, a labor worker for years and wife of Powers Hapgood, Socialist candidate for Governor of Indiana in 1934 and now working with John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, in the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Both Burt and Mrs. Hapgood declined the nomination and Nelson was selected without a dissenting voice.

Nelson, a former Wisconsin Assemblyman and Speaker of the Assembly for one term, has served on the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin.

Court Saves Debtor's Be-Diamonded Teeth

Buffalo, N. Y., May 25 (AP).—Robert Ashby doesn't have to give up two diamond-studded front teeth to satisfy a $212 judgment if he doesn't want to.

County Judge George H. Rowe ruled today that the diamonds, which Ashby had placed in his teeth several years ago, were a part of his body and could not be legally extracted to satisfy the judgment.

"A man may sell his blood for transfusion purposes," Judge Rowe said in a memorandum. "A woman may cut and sell her hair. But all this must be done voluntarily. No court can compel it."

Ashby, a Negro, was sued by Morris Abelson and judgment was granted. Abelson asked that the defendant be ordered to remove the diamonds for payment.

In his own defense, Ashby claimed that the diamonds added "luster" to his smile and were a part of his body. He said he paid $345 for them several years ago.

Sister

House at Adrian accompanied her to Washington. They were joined in the courtroom yesterday by Dominicans and representatives of several other orders at Catholic University, their dark robes balancing the somber gowns of the justices on the bench.

Sister Ann, at one time a tennis champion and amateur flier, had as her sponsor Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, of 2851 Twenty-ninth street northwest. The two women have been close friends for 15 years, and Mrs. Faircloth said she is still inclined to call the Dominican "Pet," a nickname derived from the nun's original name of Petronilla.

Those who crowded into the elaborate courtroom to watch Sister Ann take the Supreme Court oath had a long wait. Ordinarily the admissions are granted as soon as court opens, but on Mondays the opinions are read first.

Yesterday this took almost two hours. Court opens at 12 noon. It was 1:55 when the Dominican's name was called by the clerk. Fifteen persons, all men, had already been admitted. They included Representative Percy Lee Gassaway, of Coalgate, Okla. whose costume was as unusual in the courtroom as the flowing robe of Sister Ann. He had on his famous cowboy boots and a Bohemian bow tie.

Sister Ann plans to remain in Washington until Monday. Then she will return to Adrian. This fall she will teach there, at St. Joseph's College. In addition to law she will give instruction in history and political science. A week ago yesterday she returned from two years in Europe after having obtained a Doctor of Philosophy degree, magna cum laude, from the University of Fribourg, Switzerland.

Harry Spielman Held in Theft Ring

The capture of Harry I. Spielman, one of the three brothers alleged to have operated a stolen automobile ring out of Martinsburg, W. Va., was announced yesterday by the Department of Justice.

Federal agents searched for seven years from coast to coast for Spielman, whose arrest occurred in New York, where he had gone into hiding.

Both were taken to Winchester, Va., where George said the car was his and Harry was released. George later was freed under $2,000 cash bond.

Both immediately disappeared. Subsequent investigation revealed Harry and George, with a third brother, Wade, had been operating a large stolen car ring. All were indicted by a Federal grand jury in Elkins, W. Va., June 28, 1928, for conspiracy to violate the national motor vehicle theft act.

George Spielman was apprehended in California in June, 1928, and sentenced to serve two-and-a-half years. He completed his term. United States agents traced Harry and Wade, who still is at large, all over the country.

Physicians Call Hatchet Death Suspect Insane

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., May 25. — A series of physicians paraded to the witness stand today to testify that Mrs. Thelma Buxton, wife of a Washington College professor, was insane at the time her mother-in-law was hacked to death last fall.

Dr. Andrew C. Gillis, Baltimore psychiatrist, said Mrs. Buxton had regained her sanity since the killing. At that time she was not sane, he said. Dr. Frank B. Hines, jail physician, said the defendant was insane when arrested.

Family Doctor Testifies.

Dr. H. G. Simpers, Buxton family physician, also said the 28-year-old woman was insane at the time of the killing.

He said he based this opinion on her demeanor when he was called to the Buxton apartment, where Mrs. Effie Buxton had been found dead of hatchet wounds. The accused was abnormally calm, he said, and her eyes were "glary and glassy."

The State completed its case with the testimony of nine witnesses.

Mrs. Buxton, who has been in a mental hospital for observation since the killing, pleaded innocent as the trial opened today. She asked for a jury trial and a panel was chosen quickly. John W. Higman, a miller, was appointed foreman.

In his charge to the jury, Collins did not ask the jury to return a definite verdict. Five are possible under the Maryland law, and the jury decides which shall be given. They are: Guilty of first degree murder without mercy, which carries automatic capital punishment; guilty of first degree murder with a mercy recommendation, which carries a mandatory life sentence; guilty of second degree murder; guilty of manslaughter, or not guilty.

Mrs. Lewin W. Wickes, owner of the apartment where Mrs. Buxton lived with her mother-in-law and husband, testified for the State that the accused said:

"I've killed Mrs. Buxton and I suppose I'll hang for it."

3. Announcement at both Flint and Pontiac that rumors of Black Legion attempts at city political dominance would be sifted. Pontiac authorities announced an investigation to determine whether there is any basis for rumors certain patrolmen are members of a Black Legion unit.

4. An announcement by State police that at least seven witnesses, some of them former members of the Black Legion who were flogged, had agreed to testify secretly before the grand jury. "We may have as witness a former member who tried to withdraw and whose barn was burned," the announcement said.

5. An assertion by Prosecutor Owen Dudley of Jackson that testimony indicating Jerome Garfield Wolfe, Marion, Ohio, oil prospector whose body was found by the roadside near Napoleon late in 1933, might have been the victim of Vigilantes, was given at the inquest into Wolfe's death. There were tire marks on Wolfe's body, and an autopsy revealed he had died of a ruptured liver.

6. A search for suspected "higher-ups" in the organization.

7. The assertion at Jackson of Mrs. Ray Ernest, wife of a Michigan prison guard detained for questioning in Every's death, that the heavy whip found in the Ernest home, together with Black Legion regalia, firearms, and literature indicating Ernest was a "brigadier general" of the order, was hers and not her husband's. She told the prosecutor that she acquired the whip when she played in an "Uncle Tom" show.

8. An appeal by McCrea to all law-enforcement agencies here, including the local office of the Department of Justice for a "united front for the extermination of the Black Legion."

Pleas of innocent were entered for 12 of the 13 held here in Poole's slaying when they stood mute at their arraignment today. They were denied bail and their examinations were set for Wednesday. The thirteenth man named in the warrants, George C. Johnson, was reported ill in a hospital and his arraignment was deferred.

Spain Arrests 11 Bull Fighters To Stop 'Strike'

Mexicans Brave, So They Take Acclaim From Local Talent.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, May 25.—The Spanish government today ordered the arrest of all leaders of Spain's various bull fighters' associations in an effort to reach a solution of the Mexican-Spanish bull ring controversy.

An indefinite suspension of bull fights throughout Spain was threatened unless authorities achieve a compromise among the master artists of Spain's national sport.

Eleven Spanish toreros were arrested yesterday when they refused to appear in the Madrid Plaza de Toros with the Mexican star of stars, Armillita.

The Spanish bull fighters contend the Mexicans are getting so many engagements that their income is seriously curtailed. They assert, at the same time, that Mexico, by its labor laws, has virtually barred Spanish fighters from appearing in the bull rings of Mexico.

Bull fight fans who admire the Mexican style of bull fighting, however, explain the real reason for the ascendancy of the Mexicans and the lack of demand for the Spanish is public preference for the virile type of Mexican fighting.

The cold impassiveness and utter disregard for danger which characterizes the performances of the leading Mexican toreros make them great box-office attractions in Spanish arenas.

Armillita, for example, is the chief exponent of the school of the Corrida (bull fight) which believes believes the matador must avoid all "faking" and permit the charging bulls to pass so close their horns frequently rip braid and buttons from the matador's costume.

One of the favorite performances in this style of fighting is to place a handkerchief, its end protruding, in a pocket over the heart. As the bull charges past the man, one of the sharp horns jerks the handkerchief out of the pocket and it flutters above the animal's head.

Carnecerito, another Mexican and often called the greatest contemporary master of the "adorning" technique, takes his life in his hands with every bull he fights.

His favorite trick is to sit down or lie down directly in the path of the bull's charge and to wave it past him at the last moment with only a handkerchief instead of the customary red muleta (the small cape used at the time of the kill).

Spanish fans are frequently so moved by the daring of the Mexican matadors that they scream to them to use more care.

Enforce Salute To Flag, Legion Post Demands

Unit Urges Law Be Observed Without Favoritism; Board to Meet.

On the eve of the meeting of the Prince Georges County School Board to decide what should be done with the four Oxon Hill children who refused to salute the flag, Marlborough Post No. 115 of the American Legion last night adopted a resolution urging the board to enforce the law.

The resolution, signed by John D. Bowling, chairman of the resolutions committee; William H. Brooke, post adjutant, and Norman H. Collins, service officer, recommended that no exceptions be made.

They referred to section 239 of the public school law, which provides that "it shall be the duty of the (county) boards of education to prepare for use in public schools of the State a program providing for the salute of the flag and such other patriotic exercises from time to time."

The consensus at the meeting, at which Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland State Senate, was present, was that the law was compulsory and the children should be punished.

This knotty problem, first of its kind in the State, was presented two weeks ago when Fred, Louise, Walter and Esther, children of August A. Lutke, Washington post-office employe, refused to salute.

They gave religious scruples as their reason.

British Royalty Inspects Liner, Ready for Trip

Queen Mary, 69 Today, Is in Party; King Spends 4 Hours on Ship.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, England, May 25.—The British royal family, headed by England's flying monarch, bade "good voyage" to the new liner Queen Mary tonight.

From Queen Mary, still in deep mourning for her late husband, to little Princess Elizabeth, in gray tweed and a mauve straw hat, they insisted on seeing virtually every part of the giant ship, which will begin its maiden voyage to New York Wednesday.

King Edward, flying to and from Windsor to the East Leigh Airdrome near the docks, spent four hours on the vessel, then said to Sir Edgar T. Britten, the captain:

"I hope you have a good voyage to New York. Good luck for Wednesday."

A searching party was organized at tea time when Queen Mary was unable to find the rest of the visitors. The searchers found them lost in the engine room.

Other members of the party included the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

It will be a quiet celebration, even more so than in former years, with members of the royal family gathering at Buckingham Palace to extend their congratulations.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ethel Hoffman Kane presented a studio demonstration of motormental rhythmics in a series of Bach compositions danced by her students last night. Program: Prelude in E flat minor, Chorale-Prelude, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring;" Two-Part Invention No. 8, Gigue, Sarabande from the sixth violoncello sontata, Minuet from third French suite, Toccata in D minor, Sarabande from second English suite, Gavotte from third English suite, Three-Par Invention No. 15, "Little" Fugue in G minor, Chorale, "I Call Upon Thee, Jesus."

Multiple as our responses are to the patterns which music makes, the oldest of them all is undoubtedly the muscular quickening that answers to the incitement of rhythm. Dance and its companion, song, were the first musical expressions of mankind, and from them have evolved all subsequent intricacies of composition. Because of this ancient association between bodily movement and the accents of music, the dance has preserved perennial vitality, and it is for a very good reason that the dance is being studied more profoundly than ever today, when music has reached what seems to us its utmost complexity.

Mrs. Kane's students of motormental rhythmics use their bodies as instruments for the reading of music, and employ the graces of movement and pose to make visible the flow of phrase and the ictus of metre. This implies the analysis of every composition note by note and phrase by phrase, and the synthesis of these elements in dances which express the physical, mental and emotional reactions.

Into each dance there must be projected a certain amount of individual interpretation, yet one feels in the work of these dancers a complete abnegation of self and an absorption in the musical meaning. There is no exploitation of the ego, no striving for originality, but a serious intentness upon the revelation of the formal patterns and their underlying ideational content.

Particularly effective were the two chorales, in which the spirituality of the music was expressed with an obvious sincerity and finesse; the organ prelude, the toccata and the two sarabandes. One was stirred by these dances as one would be by the performance of the music on an instrument other than the body. The G minor fugue was also a moving visualization of the thematic interplay.

17 Arrested After 100 Are Questioned; Nazi Relations Strained.

Memel, Memel Territory, May 25. Spies and ballots stirred tiny, oft-troubled Memel today.

The strategic Baltic seaport, once part of Germany, now having an autonomous status nuder Lithuanian sovereignty, voted on the vexing question of composition of its municipal council.

Coincidentally, police announced they had uncovered a sensational spy plot financed by "the consulate of a certain foreign power."

This consulate, they declared, distributed a total of 150,000 lits (currently about $25,000) monthly to further espionage.

More than one hundred persons were reported questioned and 17 had been placed in jail. Some were said to have confessed.

Results Due Wednesday.

The results of the election will be announced Wednesday.

Campaigning did not reach the pitch of last autumn's Diet elections, although German-Lithuanian relations remained strained.

Lithuanians were annoyed by wholesale dismissals of Lithuanian officials by the new Nazi directorate, and by the preponderance of German teachers in the territory; Germans were irked by heavy fines imposed by the Memel garrison commandant upon two German newspapers for "inciting inhabitants against the Lithuanian government."

However, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's declaration of readiness to normalize relations with Lithuania has helped, although some Lithuanians charged the "normalization" negotiations were delayed to influence the voters.

Germans Won Elections.

The last municipal council had a German majority; the Germans won impressively in last fall's elections.

Officials who announced the spy plot said it centered in the Memel municipal corporation and that the espionage was conducted under the leadership of an official named Stoegler.

The authorities said all Memel was blanketed with a network of agents who wormed their way into municipal postal, customs and police posts, intercepted secret correspondence and turned it over to the "foreign power," which was not named.

Youth Attempts Suicide 4 Times

Louisville, Ky., May 25 (AP).—An hysterical youth arrested for robbery attempted twice to drown and twice to hang himself in the jail here today. Efforts to question him were futile.

Officers found the youth, Elmer Davidson, 18, hiding under a couch in a home into which he crept while they investigated a theft in the neighborhood. He offered to lead the police to two Negroes he said were to blame.

He led them to the Ohio River and jumped in. The Henry C. Yeiser, jr., a yacht from Wilmington, Del., picked him up. Coast Guardsmen went after Davidson. He jumped back in the river, screaming defiance at the guards. They fished him out and handed him to the police, who gave him restoratives and booked him on charges of grand larceny, storehouse breaking and dwelling-house breaking.

A few minutes later a reporter found Davidson in his cell nearly dead, hanging from a noose he contrived cut of his shirt. He was cut down and revived.

Shortly afterward he tried to hang himself with a blanket.

ABC Store for Manassas.

Richmond, Va., May 25 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board announced today it would open a new liquor store in Manassas next Monday. The store will be the sixty-ninth opened by the board.

Legal Grand Slam Permits BridgeBets

New York, May 25 (AP).—A legal grand slam was scored for American contract bridge players who like to play for something when charges were dismissed today against two New York women accused of maintaining a gambling resort.

Participants in what Ely Culbertson calls "a $60,000,000 a year American industry" hailed the verdict as meaning that operators of bridge parlors hereafter need have no fear of police raids.

The defendants, Mildred Lovejoy, 34, and Adelaide Neuwirth, 35, were supervising five tables of duplicate contract bridge in their studio on April 28 when the uninvited policemen broke up the party. The women admitted collecting a dollar from each player, half of which was set up as a grand prize.

China to Seek 'Lasting Peace' To Halt Japan

Foreign Minister Makes Plea to Check Penetration Into Northlands.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, China, May 25.—China moved for a "lasting peace" with Japan tonight in an effort to halt the spreading Japanese penetration in North China.

Gen. Chang Chun, foreign minister of the national government, appealed for establishment of an understanding between the two countries at the earliest possible moment.

At the same time authoritative Chinese quarters said Japan's recently strengthened military garrisons are seeking a more widespread occupation in North China.

"China desires no temporizing policy to ease the present situation," said Gen. Chang Chun. He spoke at a memorial sedvice for the late Dr. Sun Yet-Sen, "father" of the Chinese Republic.

Long Peace Is Aim.

"It (China) wants an understanding which will insure the peaceful existence of the two peoples for generations to come," the foreign minister continued.

"I consider the establishment of friendly intercourse between China and Japan to be an immediate challenge to the practical statesmanship of both countries.

"The present is no time to indulge in mutual recriminations or to harp on vague principles, utter coercion or reprisals and threats."

Gen. Chang asked Japan to make a simple move "which will instantly end the north China smuggling" as an evidence of her desire to co-operate.

Turning to the problem of communism in China, over which Japan has professed alarm, he said:

"China is definitely not relaxing her anti-Communist campaign. We never have contemplated the possibilities of political alliances or an attempt to play off certain powers against neighboring countries."

This wwas in reply to frequent Japanese charges that China has entered an anti-Japanese alliance with Soviet Russia.

"Live, Let Live," Is Policy.

"Our policy is to live and let live," the official continued. "While we are making a supreme effort to insure our own security, we desire that all interested powers strive for a consolidation of East Asian peace."

Chinese sources said Japanese officers at Peiping are negotiating with heads of the Hopei-Chamar political council in an effort to have the newly arrived Japanese troops occupy Chinese barracks at Nanyuan, 10 miles south of Peiping.

The Chinese claim the Japanese are pressing this issue and that Chinese officials probably will capitulate, since a refusal probably would mean that additional Japanese troops would be quartered at Peiping.

Jilted Wooer of God of Luck Finally Cashes In on Sweeps

'Unlucky' Matron Told of $250 Ticket as She Seeks a Job.

Mrs. Anna Martin is going on a long vacation today and its going to last as long as $250 can be stretched.

Mrs. Martin is 22. She held half a consolation ticket which paid $500 in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes. She was on a vacation anyway; she doesn't exactly want to push a typewriter or sell candy behind a counter.

"I'm going to take a little rest," she said.

She was going to get a job yesterday morning. She had set the alarm clock for an early morning hour. A bell rang. She reached over lazily to cut off the alarm clock, but it wasn't the clock. It was the phone.

"Well," she related in a nervous voice, "I didn't know what it could be. Then the lady told me about it. I couldn't hardly believe it."

"I've never been lucky. I'm a very unlucky person."

Mrs. Martin, who lives at 1741 Nichols avenue southeast, explained that if she were in the rain—she really said it—and it were to rain soup and she were hungry she'd have a fork.

"That's just how unlucky I am," she said. "Why, I've gambled every way. Win? I never won a nickel. This is the first ticket I ever bought. I've played the slot machines. I've played bridge. But I've never seen an honor card in my hand since I first started playing.

"Guess I must have slept under a lucky star last night.

"Isn't it wonderful?" she said as she looked down at her stockings.

"What are you going to do with your money?" she was asked.

"Why, a girl always needs things," she replied, looking at her stockings again. Frank Flaherty, with whom she bought the ticket, sat beside her on the lounge of the apartment in which she lives with her sister.

Flaherty said he won 3 cents one time matching pennies, but that he was very unlucky, too.

Mrs. Martin said she wasn't going to take that job she was trying to get—not now.

Four other Washingtonians won in yesterday's consolation awards. They were:

Mrs. Josephine Mullett, 1110 M street northwest, wife of a waiter at the Mayflower Hotel; Frank Jones, 52 United States Interior Department; Mrs. Mabel Devries, of California street northwest, and a person identified only as "Coming Back," who lives on Twentieth street northwest.

Jones said he was very excited about it all. He said he was going to California on a vacation.

Mrs. Mullett didn't have anything to say.

But of them all, Mrs. Martin was the most exuberant.

She's still smiling.

Approximately 44 per cent of the money in the counterfoil drawings went to America this year, and the majority of American winners again went to the East Coast. A total of £200,000 or $1,000,000 more than last year was being distributed to winners.

A total of 957 persons in the United States held lucky tickets this year. They will be paid $1,324,080.

MRS. ANNA MARTIN.

Divorcee Plunges 11 Stories to Death

Richmond, Va., May 25 (AP).—Mrs. Mary F. Phillips, 23-year-old divorcee, plunged 11 stories from a hotel window to her death here this afternoon. Coroner James M. Whitfield returned a verdict of suicide.

Police said the woman, an undergraduate nurse, apparently walked the 11 floors to the point of her death leap, as elevator operators said they had not seen her.

The body landed in a concrete paved alley. A purse containing 19 cents and an envelope addressed to "Mrs. Dalton, 1827 Park avenue," was picked up beside the body. She made her home with her aunt, Mrs. Beulah Dalton, here.

Two women employes of the hotel told police they saw the young woman sitting in a window of the staircase between the tenth and eleventh floors, from which she hurtled to her death a few minutes later.

Police said relatives told them Mrs. Phillips had worried over her financial and domestic affairs and had threatened to take her own life for "two years."

Smith Suspects Named in New Extortion Case

Detective, Attorney Cited With Third on Charge by Violinist.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 25.—Additional indictments charging attempted extortion were returned by the county grand jury today against Max D. Krone, private detective, and A. Henry Ross, an attorney, under indictment on extortion charges filed by Alfred E. Smith, jr., son of the former Governor.

Today's indictment also named Ernest Desmond de Hagen, known as "Lord Desmond," whose name figured in Smith's charges that he was mulcted out of $15,000 on threat of revealing his friendship with an attractive secretary.

The new indictments charge the three men with an attempt to exort $5,000 each from Pietro Aria, Brooklyn concert violinist, and Anna Graef Drouillard, a New York stenographer.

Police sent out a general alarm to locate Desmond. Krone remained in Tombs Prison under heavy bail while Ross was free on $5,000 bail on the earlier indictment.

The district attorney's office questioned Jack Dempsey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, in connection with an extortion case which Harold Hastings, an assistant district attorney, said involved Krone.

Hastings said Dempsey's name was mentioned in a letter written to Krone by Rose Bianca Grimith, a beauty contest winner who died of pneumonia in New Orleans last December.

Hastings said the letter mentioned meeting Dempsey in Cleveland, Ohio.

Dempsey told Hastings he did not know the woman, and that he was in Cleveland only one day and night in 1931, the year of the reputed meeting, when he fought K. O. Christner.

Brazil-German Barter and Australian Tariffs Cited by Hull.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull indicated yesterday this Government felt some apprehension over recent actions by several countries which might have an adverse effect on American trade in widely separated parts of the world.

He said in response to inquiries at his press conference that the State Department was giving careful attention to these week-end developments.

The action of the Australian government in enforcing rigid trade restrictions against American manufactured goods, including imposition of higher tariffs, and in some cases outright prohibition of their entry.

Brazil-German Pact.

Reports from Rio de Janeiro that Brazil and Germany had about concluded a barter arrangement whereby they would exchange $46,000,000 in goods, Germany sending heavy industrial equipment to the South American country in exchange for coffee and cotton.

Sying he wished to gather full facts before making any comment on these developments, Hull classed them as matters of genuine importance to this country.

The same is true, he said, of the situation in North China brought about by reported smuggling into that area of large quantities of Japanese manufactured articles.

Protest Smuggling.

The United States has joined with Great Britain in protesting against these activities, claiming that other foreign goods cannot compete with those which escape Chinese duties.

Most of the projected Brazilian-German arrangements and the new Australian trade restrictions are directly contrary to the principles which Secretary Hull is striving to promote on a world-wide scale through the unconditional most-favored national treatment system.

The United States and Brazil are operating under a reciprocal trade agreement which became effective on January 1. Informed sources said Brazilian purchases of American products under that treaty might be affected seriously should the projected barter arrangement be consummated with Germany.

Student Is Cleared In Traffic Death

After deliberating 45 minutes, a jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday acquitted Robert E. Smith, 17-year-old Central High School student, of manslaughter in connection with the traffic death of Elizabeth Petrey, 15, of 3822 Fifth street northwest.

The trial, held before Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, produced conflicting testimony as to whether Smith, the son of an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., was speeding when in February, 1935, his car, in passing another machine, struck the girl.

Defense witnesses testified that in their opinion Smith was not speeding when his small car ran down Miss Petrey, who was crossing the street in front of her home. At the time, it was stated, she was on her way to the home of a neighbor, where she had promised to coach several of her companions in their evening prayers.

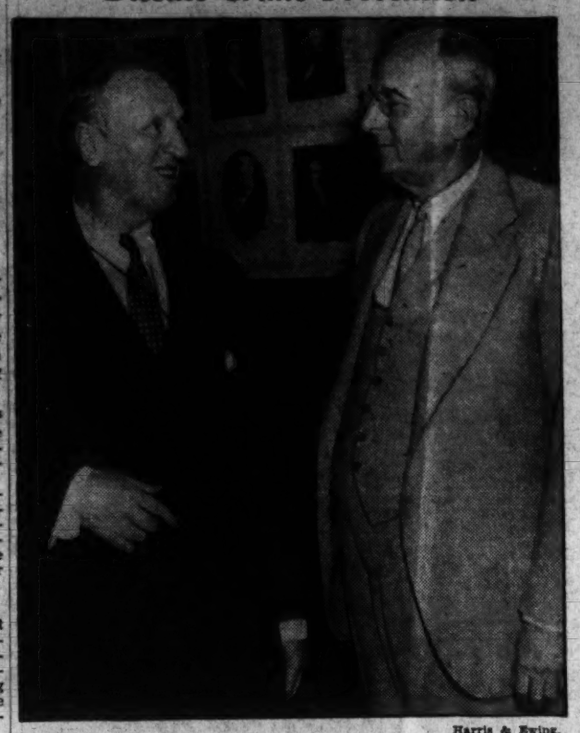
Discuss Crime Prevention



Harris & Ewing.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, and Attorney General Cummings at Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday where they reviewed pending legislation intended to give the FBI power to collect and disseminate crime prevention information.

Tax Problems Mount

William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, for estimates he said were completely out of line with revenue information furnished the House. If the House bases of estimates were followed, King told the Treasury in a memorandum, the committee's tentative corporate tax estimates would supply all of the revenue needed. King said he would not consent to a rise in normal income tax rates as long as he is convinced that the pending schedules will "do the job."

Informally, however, the committee again talked over the plan first advanced by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., (Progressive), Wisconsin, to step-up individual income brackets, and lower single and married exemptions.

New Factors Threaten Delay.

Although agreement was reached on half-a-dozen technical tax issues, and a small measure of relief granted companies in receivership, new factors of delay threatened to delay a report on the tax bill until late in the week.

An effort to inject the tariff issue into the revenue bill was sidetracked early in the afternoon, when the committee voted down an amendment by Senator Frederic Steiwer, (Republican), of Oregon, to subject rough lumber to the same import tax levied on other lumber under the 1932 law.

An informal understanding to drastically tighten administrative laws restricting "unreasonable" retention of corporate earnings, through imposition of penalty taxes, was reached by the committee, but the text of the change was subcommitted to members for study.

Other Tax Action.

Other tax action by the Finance Committee yesterday:

Where companies are in receivership or bankruptcy, 7 per cent surtax on undistributed earnings would be applied only to so much of the company's income as is available for dividends, after satisfaction of creditors.

Common trusts not to be taxed directly, but only when dividends paid.

Employers contributing to employe trusts need not pay tax on appreciation of stock value until shares in trust are actually sold.

Companies filing one consolidated tax return would receive only $1,000 exemption granted concerns earning $15,000 or less, regardless of how many concerns were involved in the consolidated statement.

Capper Plan Defeated.

The committee voted down an amendment by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, to impose a processing tax of 2½ cents a pound on sago, tapioca and casava.

The committee hopes to pick up about $50,000,000 more in revenue by abolishing the present $40,000 exemption from taxes on estates and bequests, and fixing a graded scale of exemptions on estates up to $80,000,000, but no final decision was reached.

A special sub-committee study of a proposed half-cent-a-pound tax on sugar processing contained further germs of delay. Senator King, subcommittee chairman, has ordered hearings on the proposed sugar tax at 9:30 a. m. today.

Meanwhile, the Appropriations sub-committee, facing the Finance Committee in an effort to get its relief bill on the floor first, heard additional testimony from Comptroller McCarl and Budget Director Bell, but failed to take decisive action. Bell was asked to furnish additional information on allocation of the $4,880,000,000 work relief appropriatoin made last year. McCarl promised a writ en memorandum on the legality of Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' allocations to other agencies from the proposed $1,425,000,000 work relief fund, as proposed in the House bill.

Action Possible Today.

Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the sub-committee, said there still was a possibility the group might act today. He observed smilingly that "some Senators apparently are not in a hurry."

Strong sentiment continued in the sub-committee in favor of restoring to the President authority to allocate funds from the $1,425,000,000, instead of 1 eaving it to Hopkins. The group also is expected to liberalize PWA "revolving fund" limitations to permit Public Work Administrator Ickes to make $500,000,000 in grants as well as loans from the fund.

As the finance committee's tax deliberations dragged on, leading Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat), of Missouri to observed that "we're further from an agreement than we were last week." Senator King cross-examined Lawrence Seltzer, Treasury statistician, on King's contention that Treasury tax estimates are "low."

Pointing out that Treasury experts testified in the House had used an estimated $7,200,000,000 in 1936 as a tax basis, King asked:

"If the base of $7,200,000,000 was used in computing the estimated revenues from corporate incomes for 1936 under existing law, why was not such a base used for computing the revenue from the 18 per cent flat tax imposed under the plan of the committee on finance?

"Applying an 18 per cent flat rate to a base of $7,200,000,000, we get $1,296,000,000. Subtracting $30,000,000,000 for the exemption of $1,000 to corporations with net incomes of $15,000 or less, I find we have left additional revenue of $302,000,000 to be compared with your estimate of only $215,000,000."

King, who said he expected to get a reply from Seltzer today, also reminded him of Treasury testimony that a 25½ per cent corporate income tax would produce $630,000.

Fingerprinting Bill Is Reported By House Unit

Is Voted After Cummings Urges That Activity Be Made Legal.

Attorney General Homer Cummings appeared before the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday and pleaded for favorable consideration of a bill, introduced at his request, to give the Justice Department the right to disseminate crime prevention information, and to legalize his department's work in collecting fingerprints of civilians.

"Everybody agrees collecting and tabulating fingerprints, voluntarily given, is a fine thing," Cummings said, "and we have aquired a good collection, but there is no legal basis for it. Our better class of citizens need this protection in case of kidnaping, and they demand it," he said.

Later, the committee reported the bill.

Cummings said it would permit him to send information of value in crime prevention to the various States, and to give instruction to district attorneys, marshals, prison guards and other law enforcement officers. He pointed out that recently the House killed a $35,000 item in the Justice Department appropriation to cover this activity because there was no basis for it in law.

Both the Attorney General and members of the Judiciary Committee disclaimed any intention of curbing authority of the Federal Bureau of Criminal Identification. Cummings refuted recently published reports that he planned to "cripple" the F. B. I. He joined with Senator Ashurst, chairman of the committee, in praising the work of J. Edgar Hoover and his associates. Tangibly to show their admiration for Hoover, the committee reported out a bill raising his salary from $9,000 to $10,000.

New Bill Aimed At Tax Refunds Wins Approval

By the Associated Press.

A revenue-saving measure described by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, as in some ways "bigger than the tax bill" was approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee and plans were made for its early consideration.

Its chief object was decribed as making the burden of proof so exacting on processors seeking refunds of taxes paid under the invalidated agricultural adjustment act that possibly as high as 90 per cent of the approximately $1,000,000,000 claimed in refunds will be saved the Government.

"If only 75 per cent is saved, that will be considerable," Hill said.

The measure would repeal a section of the amended and subsequently invalidated AAA, which had sought to provide refunding machinery in case of adverse court action. Under the ways and means proposal, a processor must prove conclusively that he in no way passed the tax on to the consumer or avoided it in higher sales price or lower purchasing price.

It was estimated, too, that something like $20,000,000 would be saved under another proviso tightening up a loophole in the revocable trust collections of estate taxes.

Another attempt at savings would b under an amendmen providing for the same collection procedure against personal property as against real estate in Federal tax collection.

Committee members estimated that "several million dollars" also would be saved by a provision giving the Government the right to pay part of a claim before final determination, thus reducing interest charges to the Government. Under present law, a claimant may refuse to accept any payment until the case is settled in full and then receive interest on the whole sum involved.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Leaves Estate Of $10,770,907

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 25.—Mrs. Alice Gwynne Vanderbilt, widow of Cornelious Vanderbilt, left a gross estate of $10,770,907 when she died April 22 1934, it was disclosed today with the filing of a transfer tax appraisal. The net estate was $10,004,30.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, whose husband was a grandson of the founder of the family fortune, was 80 years old and a leader in New York's original "400."

Real estate was valued at $660,000, stocks and bonds at $2,013,495, notes and cash at $1,247,252, other miscellaneous property at $820,280, transfers at $94,303, and powers of appointment at $5,935,572.

This last item represents a trust fund which Mrs. Vanderbilt set up, one-third of which was to go to the issue of her son, the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt, and two-thirds to her daugter, Gladys Countess Szechenyi, who also received the old Vanderbilt mansion at 1 East Sixty-seventh street, valued at $250,000. The third, left to the son's heir goes to his daughter, Gloria Laura Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

Another daughter, Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, was bequeathtd $150,000 outright, and a son, Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vandrebilt, received the residuary estate in trust for life. It then passes to 28 grandchildren.

Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, widow of Reginald, was bequeathed $100,000 outright.

Mr. Filene's Charges.

Edward A. Filene's charge that the United States Chamber of Commerce is a reactionary tool of special interests is obviously intended for political effect. His criticisms would have seemed more appropriate a year ago, however, than today. Indeed, many of them also apply to conditions that existed when Mr. Filene was an important factor in the chamber.

An organization like the Chamber of Commerce needs the services of men of the type of the late Judge Edwin B. Parker who was very active in its affairs. Such institutions cannot adequately represent the important interests they are supposed to serve when their activities are directed as part-time jobs. Moreover, the chamber has all the generic weaknesses of large group organizations. Mass action is generally far below the level of accomplishment which individual members seem capable of attaining. To some extent the same situation is found in Congress, where weakness and expediency often triumph over sincerity and principle for the same reason.

Those organizations which are an exception to the general rule usually have the advantage of strong leadership under men of firm character, who are in a position to influence group action, at least in some measure. But even under capable guidance of this sort, charges of dictatorial methods soon arise and complaints are lodged against placing undue power in the hands of an individual or a small group.

While there may be some truth in what Mr. Filene says, the situation is not substantially different from that which existed when he was potent in the leadership of the chamber. His observations would be more significant and more helpful, if he could point to better work done during his day, either by the United States Chamber of Commerce or more particularly by the International Chamber of Commerce, in which he took such a prominent part.

The Belgian Election.

Since March 25, 1935, Belgium has been governed by a coalition of the three old-line parties—the Catholics, the Socialists and the Liberals—which for many years have dominated the political life of the kingdom, regularly alternating in control of the government. Now, as a result of last Sunday's elections that domination bids fair to be broken, but in a manner that may not add to the peace of mind of the Belgian people.

Between them the three parties represented in the cabinet controlled 176 out of 187 seats in the last Chamber of Deputies and 158 out of 159 seats in the Senate. The Van Zeeland government, therefore, could lay claim to being the most truly national regime holding office in any democratic country since the end of the World War, having a wider base of support than even the first national government in Great Britain or the Doumergue regime that came into power in France after the bloody riots of February 6, 1934.

The union in one government of the three great Belgian parties has had the distinct advantage of suspending partisanship during a critical period of financial and economic reconstruction. Assured of their support, Premier Van Zeeland was able to put through his drastic rehabilitation measures which did much to rescue Belgium from the depths of the depression. The belga was devalued by 28 per cent; an ambitious public debt conversion operation saved the government 577,000,000 francs in interest charges; the budget was balanced and unemployment reduced by 40 per cent. At the same time, however, there was a rise in the cost of living which produced some discontent.

This discontent could find no expression through the medium of the major parties. Creation of the coalition regime had had the effect of blurring the once sharp lines of demarcation between the Catholics, Socialists and Liberals. Those who opposed the policies of the government had, therefore, nowhere to go. This helps to explain why last Sunday's elections saw an increase in strength of the Communists from 3 to 9, of the Flemish Nationalists from 8 to 16 and of the Rexists from nothing to 21.

Under the leadership of the 28-year-old Leon Degrill, who, not without reason, has been called the "Belgian Hitler," the Rexist movement has had a rocketlike rise. A curious melange of Fascist, Monarchist and Catholic ideas, it has found its principal support among discontented youth. The election figures indicate clearly that its rise has reduced the strength of the Catholic Party, itself a colation of many elements held together by loyalty to the church.

At the same time the identification of the Socialists with the government has led the discontented radical workers to seek a haven in the Communist Party. But that group is still too small to be considered a real threat.

The same probably holds true of the Rexists. They will constitute somewhat more than a tenth of the membership of the next Chamber. In view of what happened in Italy and Germany, however, it would be rash indeed to predict that young Degrille will prove to be only a passing phenomenon in Belgian politics.

Timely Advice From Experts.

In a formal statement 82 members of the Economist's National Committee on Monetary Policy, including some of our best-known experts, have urged Congress to abandon the silver buying program and repeal the silver purchase act of 1934. "It should be amply clear by this time," they asserted, "that the program not only serves no useful purpose but, on the contrary, is both wasteful and harmful."

A good deal of the damage done by the silver buying program is irreparable. It has entailed large outlays by the Treasury for the acquisition of silver at artificially high prices, giving undeserved subsidies and speculative profits to a limited number of individuals. The cost of this misguided monetary experiment in terms of taxpayers' dollars has yet to be determined, but it is certain to be large. It is impossible, of course, to estimate the extent of the losses resulting from the effect of our policies upon the domestic economy of silver-using countries. China, however, is known to have suffered heavily and has been forced to abandon the silver standard for a managed currency because of our price-boosting activities.

But such disorders are, after all, water over the dam. The matter of immediate concern is how to prevent future disasters resulting from a continuance of our silver buying program. Under the present law, the Treasury is obliged to keep buying silver until stocks on hand equal one-third the value of our gold holdings or silver rises to $1.29 per ounce.

So long as that act remains on the statute books, it will, as the economists maintain, add to the "uncertainty as to the value of the dollar, thereby limiting prospects for currency stabilization and the benefits which would accrue therefrom."

Since Secretary Morgenthau has repeatedly emphasized the value of stable exchanges and virtually invited other nations to discuss the subject, he ought to welcome emancipation from the mandatory provisions of the silver purchase act. Indeed, he has hailed the recently concluded agreement to buy Chinese silver and assist the maintenance of China's managed currency system as an important step toward international currency stabilization. If that statement has any real significance, it means that the Treasury has no intention of boosting the price of silver to fantastic levels. On the contrary, there is good reason to infer that it proposes to hold prices around present levels.

The provisional pegging of silver prices by the Treasury, however, is a very uncertain foundation upon which to build hopes of world currency stabilization. There is no guarantee that the Congressional silver bloc will not be aroused from momentary lethargy to demand that buying be pushed and that prices be raised at a rapid rate. In any case, the continuous acquisition of overvalued silver that may become the basis for new note issues increases the danger of monetary inflation.

The temporary silence of the clamorous silver bloc and the cautious attitude of the Treasury should not make the American people indifferent to present and potential dangers of the silver purchase act, or reconcile them to paying subsidies to a few silver producers at the expense of taxpayers. The economists' committee has sounded a timely warning to that effect, by recommending immediate cessation of silver purchases.

A Merited Rebuke.

Gov. Nice richly deserved the scathing rebuke administered by Leo R. Sack, American Minister to Costa Rica, for his inopportune attack upon the Roosevelt Administration while on a week-end visit to that country. Americans traveling abroad, even in a private capacity, owe it to themselves and to their country to exercise restraint in expressing their political views. What would be legitimate and enlightening criticism at home may give a wholly inaccurate impression of American institutions to foreigners unfamiliar with the strategy of our politicians.

If caution is the better policy for private citizens, it is an imperative rule of conduct for men holding high public office when they travel abroad. If Gov. Nice tells an American audience that a second term for President Roosevelt will bring ruin and bankruptcy to the United States, his hearers make due allowance for his partisan bias. Furthermore, as voters, they are in a position to influence governmental policies and perhaps avert the predicted calamity.

The people of Costa Rica or any other foreign land, however, can do nothing to change the current of political affairs within the United States, and they are not helped to a better understanding of our problems by violent expressions of opinion voiced by American officeholders. Gov. Nice has shown extremely poor judgment, and even worse taste, in using a foreign country as a "sounding board" for broadcasting an attack upon domestic policies and administration.

The Mormons' Relief Plan.

Amid the accumulating reports of inefficiency and political corruption in our national relief set-up, it is refreshing to note that the Mormon Church has taken upon itself the full responsibility of caring for its members who are unemployed. The task of finding useful work for breadwinners among 88,000 persons now on relief will certainly not be easy. When church officials assume such a tremendous obligation they must be truly alarmed over the consequences of the debauch in which the country is now indulging.

There is nothing particularly novel about the plan adopted by the Latter-Day Saints. Their president, Heber J. Grant, has referred to it as a return to first principles. Bishops have been instructed to aid destitute families in their own congregations, with the help of the Relief Society and other auxiliary organizations. In other words, relief will be reduced to the simplest basis of organized aid for jobless men, supplied chiefly by their more fortunate friends and neighbors. Therein lies its significance. For as J. Reuben Clark of the church presidency has pointed out, men who felt "no compunction in taking aid from the Government" are likely to be more thrifty and enterprising when the alternative is charity.

Useful work will be required of those aided. But the administrative personnel will not be paid. Members will give their time to this enterprise as to other social service and religious duty. In this way, Mr. Clark believes, the cost of relief can be reduced by 55 per cent. Apparently the church as an organization is willing to assume this expense, in spite of the fact that its members will have to contribute to relief in general through taxation, to escape the demoralizing influence of Federal doles and WPA "jobs."

The reasoning behind this movement is even more interesting than the methods to be employed. Apparently the Mormon Church feared a breakdown in the moral fiber of its members if they should continue to live in idleness on Federal funds. As Mr. Clark puts it, "we found that idleness kills everything fine in a man." The new plan was adopted, he says, only after the church had discovered a noticeable decline in the spiritual development of its members.

The cash outlay necessary to operate this plan is estimated at $1,000,000 per year. Its basis is not economic, however. It is social. The chief objectives seem to be a lesson in unselfishness for all members and the teaching of self-reliance to the unemployed. Pioneer traditions of thrift and resourcefulness were strong in the Intermountain West, where most of the membership of this church is concentrated, until weakened during the depression by dole psychology. This organized effort to revive those characteristics so nearly lost under the New Deal is the more significant because it coincides with a dawning national realizatfon that self-reliance and local responsibility are first essentials to successful democracy.

Shekels And The Schechters.

Presumably the identity of the first person to inquire which came first—the egg or the chicken—will always remain as obscure as the question is puzzling. But there is no doubt in anyone's mind as to the originator and the decision in another equally burning poultry dispute. And that is the one in which the Schechter brothers asked the Supreme Court which had the right of way—the NRA or their chickens.

Now, on the first anniversary of their victory, the Messrs. Schechter are once more faced with what appears to be a moot question—what price glory? Their carefully prepared 203-page brief, challenging the theory of the recovery act as unconstitutional, is now simply a matter of court record. Their home in Brooklyn bears no plaque to mark the spot to tourists, but a For Sale sign put on by mortgagees. And the original A. L. A. Schechter Poultry Corporation has passed into legend via newspaper morgues. Moreover, when it seemed the time for all good friends to come to the aid of the poulterers, remittances came in congratulations rather than cash.

For consolation, the Schechter brothers should try to visualize the importance of their position in history books of the future. Under chapter headings such as "The Fight Against NRA," school children of 1986 will find that the Schechters' name leads all the rest! Their troubles will have been forgotten, or at least reduced to footnotes. Descendants of the harassed poulterers may find delight in looking up their ancestors in all reputable case books on constitutional law.

It is too bad that the Schechter brothers are men. For, if women, they might have been able to derive any amount of satisfaction from simply knowing that they had the last word.

The freedom most of those wild-eyed zealots are yelling for is the kind that would allow you to do as they please.

Charlottesville's Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Down here in Charlottesville a very important question is under discussion. The question is: "Should Charlottesville have Sunday movies?" The citizens of this town have many angles of opinion on this question. Some favor it; some do not.

Some want Sunday movies because of its advantages. Many persons work through the week and are so busy that they do not have time for a movie. With Sunday movies these persons would be able to add to their recreational routine by attending a good movie once a week. It would give more persons work because the Sunday run would add to the shift already employed by the theaters. Sunday movies would decrease traffic around Charlottesville because many persons would prefer a good movie instead of an auto ride. These Sunday movies would be educational if the right kind were shown.

The citizens who are not in favor of Sunday movies consider the above advantages to be disadvantages. Persons who work through the week and do not have time for a movie in the week would naturally attend a Sunday show. This person might be a regular attending church member at both the morning and evening services. To have a comfortable day this person, if he were a Sunday moviegoer, would have to discontinue one of the church services. Instead of giving more people work Sunday movies would give some operators a seven-day week. Traffic would be increased because persons from other nerby towns would come to Charlottesville for a Sunday movie because Sunday movies were not allowed in their locality or they were not provided with a movie house at all. Sunday movies might not be the right kind for Sunday.

The Florida Ship Canal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A considerable section of Florida has been suffering from a severe drought. Orange trees, which ten weeks ago looked in splendid shape with an exceptionally heavy bloom, are now parched and the leaves shrivelling. The level of the water in our precious "flow" wells has dropped 2 feet or more, so that in many cases we can no longer irrigate with it. This situation brings home to us, very closely, the danger of tampering in any way with Florida's underground water supply. In our more or less tropical summers the fresh water supply is the very breath of life itself, without which existence is not possible.

Yet, in face of this fact, unscrupulous interests looking no further than the immediate chance of filling their own pockets, are prepared to jeopardize the very existence of a great number of people in Florida by destroying forever the sources of pure underground water.

Political interests close to the Administration are still bending every effort to secure additional appropriations for the Florida ship canal, although the theory of its economic justification has been completely exploded. At least $80,000 of money from Jacksonville has been spent in the effort to lobby through the scheme. No fair, open, thorough public investigation of the canal has ever been held.

The people of Florida, as a whole, have had no chance to express their opinion in regard to the canal. The Governor of Florida has never expressed any views about the canal, although it is the most important issue facing his State.

The people of Florida, who started the opposition to the canal, are mainly the farmers, to whom the fresh spring water is so necessary. Their campaign is weakly financed by small contributions. But their cause is just and, therefore, it has enlisted the support of newspapers, of chambers of commerce and, lastly, of statesmen in Washington. Congress has defeated the canal measure. But the predatory interests are attempting, by high-handed procedure, to void this mandate.

I call upon all fair-minded representatives to take final steps in relegating the Florida canal to oblivion. JAMES M. HOWE.

Comment On Refusals To Salute.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The public press has published from time to time the almost unbelievable, not to say unspeakable, accounts of a certain religious sect or denomination educating and training their offspring to ignore, and decline to recognize or salute the flag of the United States. In a near proximity to Washington this indoctrination has plainly evidenced itself in the expression of a family where four of the children refuse to salute or recognize the flag in the daily public school exercises, and one of the parents of these children is reported as being in the employ of the United States Government.

It appears that these children's alibi or excuses for not participating in the flag exercises is grounded in their religious beliefs and convictions of faith. They state that they have been taught by their elders and parents that they owe undivided allegiance to "Jehova," in accordance with a misinterpretation of the scriptural injunction contained in the Ten Commandments that "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." On this commandment is based their refusal to pay allegiance to the flag. Such an interpretation is wholly a misguided and erroneous conception of the meaning and purport of this scriptural injunction.

There is absolutely no evidence or authority in Holy Writ, profane or secular history, requiring a devotee of any religious denomination or sect to obligate himself to run counter to, ignore, disown or show disrespect to the flag of the country or nation wherein he may happen to reside.

The flag is the symbol of authority and represents the power of the people, and anyone who refuses allegiance to the flag of the United States, and continues in its employ thereunder, flouts the power and authority of the Government, and certainly is not a fit person to represent it as one of its employes. The parents of these children should be given a copy of Edward Everett Hale's book, entitled "The Man Without a Country," and probably after reading this treatise it might enlighten his patriotic motives and his attitude toward the flag his country flies.

A VETERAN.
Washington, May 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So often pictures and articles appear in the papers of children who refuse to take part in flag exercises, that I feel impelled to send in to you the comment thereon of an experienced teacher.

From the standpoint of helping the children, the publicity given them is unfortunate. No blame should attach to the newspaper or its representatives. It is outside their specialty to know the subtile workings of children's minds. The teachers or school officials who have muffed the situation in the first place and then allowed their mistake to be publicized are responsible.

It is a trait of human nature to like to be noticed. In young children, it is often a ruling passion; and many childish acts are explainable by it and by it alone. If a child refuses to take part in a flag exercise, the teacher should say quietly and quite as though it didn't matter at all: "Very well, Johnny, suppose you bring a book in here (picking out a retired spot where Johnny won't be noticed) and read until the exercise is over." The chances are that Johnny will feel very much left out, and as though he was missing something, and the next time will be only too glad to take his part with the group.

The frequency with which these flag incidents occur are a sad commentary on the type of training our teachers are receiving. Any number of good books on child training, both popular and more scientific, are at their disposal, and they should be better informed.

Perhaps the newspapers could help by refusing publicity to the children, who doubtless regard themselves as heroes, and by allaying the fears of the public, that vast body of overanxious adults untrained to analyze childhood manifestations.

HELEN GILLISS.
Washington, May 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am a daily reader of your paper and have seen several articles pertaining to children refusing to salute the American flag. It seems most of them are what they call Jehova's Witnesses. It is not up to me to judge or condemn any man's religion.

One paper said that the children were told that to salute the flag would be having another God before them. To be a disturber of the peace and refuse to abide by the rules and customs of one's country is as bad as having another God. We are all told not to be troublemakers in any way. We are, to be loyal citizens, to obey the customs of our land.

I am a mother and have deemed it a glorious privilege to have my grown sons and daughters, when they were children, come home from school and tell me of their allegiance to the flag by saluting it and repeating the allegiance oath.

The American flag to me, and to all law-abiding people, is a symbol of protection and purity. And when we really have religion and are obedient to God, we are loving toward our fellow man and obedient to the laws and customs of the land. A MOTHER.

Prince Georges County.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several months ago the commissioners of Prince Georges County were quoted as being disturbed at the backward trend in the county as regards the failure of people to come into and buy in the section surrounding Washington.

These able gentlemen should make a survey of the nearby District area and they might profit thereby. May I enumerate one or two or perhaps more serious obstacles which militate against securing new residents of desirable character.

First: The abominable and costly transportation facilities. The car line, say to Beltsville, along a thickly populated section, could scarcely be worse. This line has been the frequent object of citizens' indignation meetings through such towns as Riverdale, College Park, Berwyn and Branchville.

Second: Utility rates are excessive. Gas rates were so high many took to electricity. The electric rates are reasonable enough in the suburban area but an imaginary line is drawn across the road and doubles my rates.

Third: Money. I had recently endeavored to refinance a small improved property. The bank with which I have done business for years refuses to loan money on any property over three years old. The building and loan association will give you about one-third of the value on a property in good condition on which there is no loan.

This is only the beginning. I do not dare go into taxes, highways, etc. MARY P. DORSEY.

Political History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twenty-four years ago Woodrow Wilson said, "I will not grovel at the feet of William Randolph Hearst." Wilson was nominated.

In view of the recent defeat of the Hearst-Merriam sponsored Landon delegation in California, is this an omen which Mr. Landon should take into account, since he seems to have Presidential aspirations? Because of this I have taken the liberty of sending Mr. Landon a telegram calling attention to former President Wilson's statement and the fact that he was nominated.

The Post Impressionist

Modern Cities Of Refuge.

Post Office, Tuesday.

"YOUR very interesting articles on certain unspoiled American villages and towns have been greatly enjoyed," writes a Column-reader from Charles Town, W. Va.—and then adds: "I feel, however, that there are some other places which might have been mentioned in your survey, but were not."

Whereupon our correspondent proceeds to mention some of that some.

* * *

"First," the letter continues, "there is, on the eastern end of Long Island, a village which will be 300 years old in 1948, and has kept the old-time features in an amazing way, though now tainted, unhappily, with wealth. A discovery, indeed, was the artists' discovery of this village of East Hampton in the Eighteen Eighties. . . .

"Across the Sound are some equally lovely old towns. There is Norwich. In the northwest of the State we find Litchfield, thought by many to be the most beautiful village in the world, and nearby are charming Sharon and Salisbury.

* * *

"In New York, on the Hudson," our correspondent further recalls, "is Rhinebeck, settled long ago by Hollanders—but the surrounding estates now belong to the very rich. In central New York, and also grown from Dutch beginnings, stands old Cazenovia on its lovely lake.

"Since my ancestors were among the pioneers responsible for those settlements, I may be somewhat prejudiced in their favor. But I am not alone in praising them: their fame has gone abroad . . ."

* * *

And then—yes, you've guessed it—our correspondent quite correctly concludes:

"This Charles Town in which I am now staying is a splendid place, founded by brothers and nephews of the First President. Their descendants still live here, and over it still broods the spell of other days than ours."

* * *

The Post-Impressionist is glad to be reminded of these additions to his list—and would be glad again to receive others. He himself could suggest some likely candidates for the roll among the remaining Quaker towns of Pennsylvania and among the surviving old Pennsylvania-Dutch villages.

* * *

To be sure, we hadn't intended any list at all. We were merely generalizing and illustrating our generalization by casual instances. But the reactions of our readers thereto have been such as to convince us that a catalogue of this kind would prove useful.

* * *

We admit that the world has to go on—though reasons for its continuance are not always brightly apparent to a finite eye. Nine-tenths of the race are caught in the machine they have made. They must keep greasing its axles and running with its wheels in the secret hope that some day the mechanism will break down, without injuring them too severely, and leave man once more free of his inventions.

But, meanwhile, "hope deferred maketh the heart sick." Racial memories of former times steal into the power-house and lean over the guard-rail—and beckon.

* * *

Every once in a while members of the nine-tenths may heed that summons, accept that invitation. The machine isn't—yet—so exacting as to forbid them breathing spells. One can run away for a few hours, now and then, even though a law that is stronger than the very machine soon drags one back to the power-house.

Well, when these chances come, the places to seek are those old-time towns and villages which retain the glamour of ease and still dream the dream of tranquillity.

* * *

You say that this is itself a mechanism—an escape-mechanism.

What of it?

"Fight the devil with fire." "Set a thief to catch a thief." These are still practical proverbs. So the process is an escape, even if only a temporary escape, what matter?

* * *

It is some years since we have favored East Hampton with a visit; we now learn for the first time that there has been any great invasion of wealth into the village.

We have never been to Rhinebeck at all; but we are perfectly willing to believe that the estates surrounding it "now belong to the very rich."

Nevertheless, we have no objection to an invasion of wealth anywhere, so long as we are in the line of march. And, if we were among the very rich, we would certainly acquire an estate, if not near Rhinebeck, then somewhere uncommonly like that terrain.

* * *

Meanwhile, if wealth and the very rich don't do things to East Hampton and Rhinebeck which ruin the charm of those places—don't alter the qualities that drew wealth and the very rich there—why, we're not disposed to forbid even wealth and the very rich from getting at East Hampton and Rhinebeck, such recesses as they can get from the power-house.

Fair Enough

Inveterate Guest.

Prophecy is not my line, but I dare say that the American people have a better than even chance to play host for four more years to Senator Wild Bill Lyons, the executive assistant to the Postmaster General and the great American guest. Senator Lyons occupies an office close to that of James A. Farley, in which he performs his public services. These duties consist of clipping and pasting in scrapbooks all the articles and cartoons that he can find in the papers relating to Mr. Farley and himself and of keeping the Postmaster General amused. This latter phase of his work is surely a worthwhile public project, though hardly to be classed as self-liquidating.

Mr. Lyons has worn the title of Senator for many years, explaining that he was for a spell in his early days a member of the upper house of Colorado. He will admit, also, under so little pressure as to be scarcely noticeable, that he once rode with the Texas Rangers—as their guest, no doubt.

That phase of his career was a little before my time, however, and I have known him only as an inveterate guest—the constant guest, as you might say—and as a clothing salesman touring the beet fields and mine fields of the West with a line of snappy two-pants suits with belt in the back, combining the best goods with the highest character and workmanship for as little as $12.

After Jack Dempsey came along to be heavyweight champion of the world Mr. Lyons became his guest on many occasions over the period of his reign, and after Dempsey lost the title the Senator attached himself to Mr. Farley, who was then just beginning to organize Frank Roosevelt. Always during my acquaintance with the Senator he has had steady employment, either in the two-pants suit with belted backline or as executive assistant of the Postmaster General. Yet, if you were to ask me what he does I would instinctively reply:—"Do? Why he is a guest."

I would recall the times when the Senator said, "Well, I'm off to Europe tomorrow—the guest of the champ," or "See you in Louisville—I am Damon Runyon's guest this year," or "Jim Farley has asked me to be his guest at the Democratic convention." Then, too, there were ever so many evenings in Wiliam La Hiff's tavern in New York when the Senator dropped in to dine as the guest of this or that sportsman before going over to the Garden to see the fights as the guest of the management.

It seems almost as if there is some law in this country or a great national conspiracy to prevent the old Senator from getting of his hands, not that it has been any great struggle to prevent him from doing so. The Senator just seems to accept the situation gracefully and submits peacefully to a fate which denies him the privilege of lifting the tab for the party.

There have been some great fumblers along Broadway who could break an arm churning their pants pockets while the waiter went to sleep on his feet, but the old Senator is not one of those. If a man is a guest it is bad manners for him to give the bill so much as a distant glance, and even worse form is to fumble. In this respect the Senator can look the whole world in the face.

The Senator's guessmanship extends to other phases of his existence. He has probably the greatest American collection of season passes for things, including gold-engraved passes and heavily embossed cards of admission and, of course, his warrant of appointment as special assistant to the Postmaster General in itself is a pass. It has given him the status of guest of the American Nation for almost four years now, and its renewal will extend the invitation for four years more.

Senator Lyons wears a toupee with a white blaze down the middle which sometimes gets turned somewhat slaunchwise in the heat of a social evening, and he generally carries a walking stick suitable for beating up whole gangs of desperadoes on dirk streets at night.

In Washington, having no inhibitions he is a very helpful man to his friends. I dare say that if I were to call him up in the middle of the night to get me out of jail he would immediately telephone Chief Justice Hughes and yell: "Hey, Charlie, Peg is in the can for some trouble with a cop; we have got to get him out."

That reminds me that the Senator has never been my guest. I must invite him to dinner, although I probably will have to wait my turn, for most likely he is booked up years in advance.

Peace In The Americas

United States Turns Attention Southward, Intent on Avoiding Entanglement With Europe Where Storm Clouds Gather.

By Benjamin H. Williams.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

AS STORM clouds lower over Europe and Asia the indicator which points the direction of American diplomacy has swung definitely toward the south. Fear of entanglements in disastrous wars, which will waste the resources of the United States and gain for us only a new crop of soldiers' bonus and allied war debt disputes, seems now to dictate that we shall not extend our political activities across the Atlantic or the Pacific. No such apprehension prevents the development of closer relations with Central and South America, for, at present, no substantial military opponent confronts us in those areas.

The annually recurring creditor balance of the United States creates a strong outward pressure which must express itself in some form of diplomatic activity, and the line of least resistance along which this force finds its most satisfactory outlet leads at the present time toward Latin America.

The war system of Europe has also given Latin American nations strong economic reasons for closer co-operation with the United States. In 1914, when the World War played havoc with the commerce between Europe and the Americas, a mighty stimulus was given to the development of intra-American trade and finance. European loans to Latin America were stopped and credits were withdrawn. Shipping connections were broken. In the First Pan-American Financial Conference, held in Washington in May, 1915, the new interdependence of the Americas was the theme which ran consistently through the proceedings.

Paraguay An Example Of Interdependence.

TO TAKE but one example, the group conference report regarding Paraguay, in which country the commercial influence of the United States had been almost negligible, read as follows:

The steady development of Paraguay's resources requires foreign capital which, at least while the European war continues, is not obtainable in the European money market. It is apparent that judicious investment of United States capital would be a powerful aid to the export of United States products by expanding the wealth and purchasing power of Paraguay.

During the war our exports to Paraguay increased about eight times in value, and by 1919 our exports to Latin-America as a whole had trebled.

In those days there was much talk about the "new Pan-Americanism;" and, indeed, some actual increase in Pan-American activities resulted. The Pan-American Union grew in size and activity. But the dominant note of United States policy in Latin-America was imperialism. Despite the fair words of President Wilson, American troops occupied two Caribbean republics. Several thousand caco dead, strewn among the Haitan hills, testified to the majesty of American power; but the demonstration dealt a severe blow to Latin-American confidence in the United States.

Today, however, our Latin-American policies are nonimperialistic. The retreat from imperialism became a definite movement some seven or eight years ago. Since that time American Marines have evacuated Haiti and Nicaragua as they had previously withdrawn from the Dominican Republic. The Platt amendment has been abrogated. A strict interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine has been adopted following the lines of the Clark memorandum, and the doctrine no longer sanctifies imperialistic enterprises. Interventions in Latin-America have been renounced. Altogether present policies represent a remarkable change since the "big stick" of Theodore Roosevelt, the dollar diplomacy of Philander C. Knox, the armed occupations of Woodrow Wilson, and the defense of armed intervention at Havana in 1928 by Charles Evans Hughes.

No one can confidently predict that the renunciation of imperialism is to be a permanent characteristic of American diplomacy. Future developments will be determined by national subconscious forces as yet undisclosed. But the surface indications at present display a trend toward co-operation and peace. The stage has been set for the amicable development of Pan Americanism. Recently President Justo of Argentina declared to his Congress:

Today there is not a single shadow to disturb the mutual relations of the Americas and the ever-growing respect for the equality and rights of all the republics.

Buenos Aires Meeting Will Discuss Peace Plans.

PEACE machinery is the most important part of the complexus known as Pan-Americanism, and it now stands particularly in the limelight because of the approaching conference at Buenos Aires. While whole world organizations, such as the League of Nations and the Permanent Court of International Justice, will be indispensable in any worth-while system of war prevention, there are certain definite supports which regional organization must also give.

In fact it may well be argued with regard to most disputes which threaten war that the first and most fundamental approach to a solution must be through regional agencies. This is probably more true in the Americas than in Europe. Latin-American nations are not so much an integral part of a sensitive world unity as are the nations of Europe, and wars among them do not possess that ravaging epidemic character that characterizes those of the Old World.

Thus the war between Paraguay and Bolivia, at least so far as actual hostilities were concerned, remained a local conflict. The failing power of the League of Nations has made it essential, for the time being, that great vigor be given to regional organization.

A substantial beginning has already been made in the creation of Pan-American peace machinery. A number of treaties exist and each has been ratified by a considerable number of American republics. The Gondra treaty of 1923 provides for inquiry by commission into such disputes as can not be diplomatically settled. The General Convention of Inter-American Conciliation of 1929 adds the function of conciliation to the commission's duty of inquiry. The Inter-American arbitration treaty of 1929 binds the parties to arbitrate juridicial disputes except those arising from domestic questions and questions affecting the interests of third parties.

The Pact of Paris renounces war as an instrument of national policy. The Anti-War Treaty of 1933, which was initiated by Argentina but which, like the Pact of Paris is not confined to American countries, provides that the parties shall settle their disputes by pacific means and that they shall refuse to recognize any territorial arrangements not obtained through pacific means. Defects in existing peace machinery was revealed by the Leticia and Chaco disputes.

Pan-American League May Be Considered.

IT IS too early to speak with confidence about particular matters to be considered in the coming conference, for the plenary agenda committee has not yet reported. Among matters which will doubtless be considered at this or subsequent conferences are wider adherence to existing treaties, the project for a Pan-American League of Nations, a Pan-American court, the codification of international law, and the acceptance of the Monroe Doctrine as a unilateral obligation.

Suggestions for a Pan-American League of Nations have included plans for strengthening the governing board of the Pan-American Union as an agency for conciliation and for clothing it with wider powers to proposed legislation. At present the board is forbidden to consider political questions, but the prohibition has not been entirely observed.

Probably the creation of a Pan-American court of justice to deal with juridical matters is essential to a successful Pan-American organization. The court would not only take judicial disputes out of the turmoil of diplomacy but it would doubtless develop a body of judge-made law for the Western Hemisphere. The improvement of the inter-American system of law is an especially urgent need. Frequently the United States, a creditor Nation, has been at odds upon legal principles with Latin-American countries, which are importers of capital. Differences should be smoothed out by means of principles developed by the proposed tribunal or through codification in Pan-American conferences.

By strengthening Pan-American organization with regard to these and other matters the coming conference may go far in affecting the decision of the most fundamental political problem of the Western Hemisphere. It may help to determine the question whether the disputes of the future are to be settled by co-operative effort or whether resort will be had to the simpler, more primitive, but more ruthless and destructive methods of imperialism and war.

Rail 'Sabotage' Is Laid to RFC In Investigation

Evidence Given at Hearing to Spur Lines Merger, Shipstead Says.

Charges that officers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are trying to "sabotage" the interests of the first mortgage bondholders of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad t othe profit of Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier, were made yesterday by James F. McElwee, president of the Lake Erie Manufacturing and Mining Co., Peoria, Ill., before a Senate Investigating committee headed by eSnator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota.

After hearing the evidence presented by McElwee, eSnator Shipstead said he believed the facts brought out by his committee would hasten consolidation of all American railroads under the supervision of the Federal Government, as projected by Rail So-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman.

"When the Reconstruction Finance Corporation goes out of its way to aid private interests, at the expense of legitimate business, the entire purpose of the FRC is defeated," Senator Shipstead said. "I recall that the Senate recently remove from office Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, and one of the charges against him was that he discriminated against the first mortgage bondholders in the Whitehall Hotel case. Bondholders of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad are receiving similar treatment, it would appear."

Letter Is Revealed.

Chief evidence pertaining to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and in patricular to John Barriger, chief examiner of the RFC railroad division, was a letter written by McElwee last April, in which he recounted a conversation and quoted Barriger as saying he was "looking out for Prince's interests."

Informed of McElwee's testimony, Barriger denied it all, and declared he had never made any attempt to protect the interests of Prince.

Both Barriger and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, declined further comment until they have an opportunity to appear before the committee.

"I was quite appalled at the frankness and the cold-blooded manner in which Mr. Barriger discussed the matter with me," McElwee quoted from his letter, which had been sent to Herbert F. Horner, of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce.

"He stated that it was his job," McElwee read, "as a friend to Mr. Frederick Prince, of Boston, to see to it that no loan should ever be made by the Reconstructin Finance Corporation to Mr. Frederick Lisman, of New York, for the purchase of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway, but that during his absence on a vacotion in Denver, Mr. Jones had promised a loan to Mr. Lisman provided he could secure the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the purchase of the railroad."

"He further stated that upon his return it was his job to devise some scheme whereby Mr. Jones' promise of a loan to Lisman could not be carried out and that he originated the scheme of having the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad dismembered and portioned out to the various lines.

"He stated that he had a hard job to sell the idea to Mr. Jones, but that he had sold it to him and sold it to him in such a manner that no one would ever be able to get Mr. Jones to change his mind or talk him out of putting the deal through."

Divorce For A Radio Celebrity's Bride.

Q. Now then, Mrs. Blank, when did you first meet the defendant?

A. I am not positive, except that it must have been some time between his broadcast and his preparation for it.

Q. Isn't that pretty indefinite?

A. In the life of a radio star, it covers everything.

• • • •

Q. Did you love him?

A. I thought so, but it may have been just audience reaction.

Q. Did he propose to you?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. Oh, things like "I love you," "You're the girl of my dreams," "I can't live without you," etc.

Q. Those were not statements, they were song titles, were they not?

A. Well, he always talked in song titles.

Q. Now, when he asked you to be his wife, what did you say?

A. I said what you have to say to any big man in the amusement business.

Q. What was that?

A. "Yes."

Q. After you were married, was he unkind to you at once?

A. No, for the first few weeks he gave up crooning in the house.

Q. Was he considerate and attentive?

A. Only when not reading his fan mail.

Q. Did he take you out much?

A. Only between commercials.

Q. And then where did he take you?

A. He took me to Radio City.

White Fellowship in modern history in 1919-20. Since 1923 he has written a daily article for the Buffalo News on national and international affairs. He also was associated with the University of Buffalo as lecturer on history and international relations.

He has been abroad frequently and in 1929 spent several months in the Far East, where he obtained interviews with former Premier Tapaka, Foreign Minister Shidehara, Foreign Minister C. T. Wang, T. V. Soong, and many other notables in China and Japan, which were printed in a number of American newspapers. He also was granted the unusual privilege of an interview with Admiral Togo, Japan's great naval hero. His correspondence from the Far East received honorable mention for the Pulitzer Prize in 1930. He is the author of "Why War Came." He covered the Sino-Russian war over the Chinese Railway for the North American Newspaper Alliance in 1929. He has written many articles and reviews for magazines.

trol over the amount charged to his wife's account."

The committee will meet in executive session again today. It may hear other members of the Townsend organization later in the day, unless they obey the doctor's orders and refuse to show up.

Meanwhile, Townsend issued another statement from Baltimore, where he has donned his striped pajamas, in which he was photographed last week, for a rest.

He Wants Dignity.

Townsend intimated that Congress lacked dignity. He even mentioned the antics of Representative Zioncheck, and added:

"As a citizen who loves his country, I could no longer sit quietly and witness the further degradation of our House by a proceeding which was un-American, unjust and unconstitutional."

In fact, he said, the proceedings of the committee were "unseemly and disgraceful."

In spite of the committee's inability thus far to let go of the political bear which it had by the tail, Speaker Byrns continued to insist that Townsend should be cited for contempt.

"Not to Be Flouted."

"The House of Representatives is not going to be flouted," he said. "I do not know what action the committee will take, but personally I believe Dr. Townsend should be tried in Federal court instead of in the House."

He pointed out that a trial in the House might delay adjournment indefinitely.

He said that if the House "is not willing to assert its authority, it will destroy all future Congressional investigations."

Townsend leaders summoned before the committee today, who have been "ordered" by the doctor not to appear, are John E. Keifer, Chicago; Charles M. Hawks, Boston; the Rev. Alfred J. Wright, Cleveland, and the Rev. Clinton Wunder, New York.

Golden-Brown Covering.

First, she takes three-pound chickens, quarters them, and then dredges them in flour which has been seasoned with salt and a very little pepper. Then she plunges them in an electric deep fat frier and cooks them in the vegetable fat for about 15 or 20 minutes. This process gives the pieces a golden-brown crisp covering which keeps the natural juices inside.

At the end of the 15 or 20 minutes the portions of chicken are placed on the rack in the bottom of a heavy aluminum braising pan with a very little stock below the rack. The pan has been heated until it is at least warm before the chicken is placed in it and Mrs. Birks emphasizes the importance of using an extremely heavy pan, the type used in restaurants.

The pan is covered and the chicken cooked over a low fire for a half hour or perhaps a little longer. Then it is ready to serve and it's practically guaranteed to take a man's mind off a report on the monthly household bills.

At least that's the way some of the women who attended the Brookings Institution dinner feel about it, after listening to the men rave in ecstasy as they picked the last tiny morsel from the bone.

Still Hell Bent

By James P. Warburg
Author of "Hell Bent for Election,"
Formerly One of President Roosevelt's Financial Advisers.

Chapter Three.

In Spite Of, or Because Of?

Having seen that the alternative to another four years of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal is not—and, in fact, cannot be—"a return to what we had before the New Deal began," let us examine the second of the three widely held convictions which we have set out to demolish, namely:

"We are undoubtedly better off today than we were in March, 1933. Such recovery as we have had is due to Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to conquer the depression."

Or, differently stated:

"Republican mismanagement caused the depression. New Deal management—in spite of all its mistakes—has brought us at least partially out of it."

Perhaps the oldest axiom in politics is that the popularity of a government increases with prosperity and decreases with hard times. I imagine it was true in the earliest tribal days.

And why shouldn't it be?

It is human nature, when anything unpleasant happens, to seek a scapegoat. If you bump your head on the corner of a table as you pick up your napkin, you blame the table. If you play bad golf, you blame your caddy, or the weather, or your opponent's habit of talking too much. If you play bad bridge you blame your partner or the cards.

And if there are hard times, you blame the Government.

It is a comfortable consolation, because it is so easy to do and so sociable. Everyone can join in and do it together.

Mr. Roosevelt, who has a shrewd understanding of the weaknesses of human nature, realized and quickly seized upon the value of this ancient axiom. He made it the theme song of his 1932 campaign, and he is now skilfully improvizing upon it his "Variations of 1936."

Tune Not So Popular But Melody Lingers On.

The tune is not as popular as it used to be, but it has become fixed—as popular melodies do—in the minds of a great number of people, and they go around whistling it, often unconsciously.

If Mr. Roosevelt can keep them whistling it—consciously or unconsciously—for another few months, the public is quite likely to re-elect him.

Let us examine this contention and see whether we believe in it or not. If we believe in it, well and good. But, if we don't believe in it, then let us be sure we don't go around whistling the tune unconsciously, and thus cause others to whistle it, too.

That is what a lot of us are doing.

Let us begin by agreeing upon a premise: namely, that we were in a very bad way in 1932, and that we are in a much better way in 1936. To what extent this is true, and at what price we have achieved the progress made so far will be discussed in a later article, under the heading of "At least he has tried and, if re-elected, will keep on trying."

We are at this moment concerned with two things:

1. Was the depression caused by Republican mismanagement?

2. Has the recovery which has taken place since March, 1933, come about because of, or inspite of Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal?

Upon these two questions we must have a clear opinion, if we are to vote intelligently, and not as sheep, this November.

But, when I say "a clear opinion," it does not necessarily mean a completely one-sided opinion. For example, take the first of the two questions now under discussion.

It seems to me just as futile and beside the point for the Republicans to claim that they had nothing to do with the depression as it is for Mr. Roosevelt to assert that they, and they alone, caused it.

Depression Due Under Any Administration.

The truth of the matter, as I see it, is this:

The depression would have come upon us under any management—Republican, Democratic, or New Deal Socialistic. It happened to come under a Republican Administration, and after two previous Republican Administrations. There were undoubtedly mistakes made during these 12 years by the Republican Administrations—mistakes which made the depression deeper and more painful than it need have been—but who knows whether any other Administration would not have made the same or other equally damaging mistakes?

In any case, whatever mistakes were made, they did not cause the depression; at the very most they may have aggravated or prolonged it.

And it was not only by Government that our mistakes were made. Let us look back for a moment.

The World War ended in 1918 with a peace treaty which we now recognize as in many respects practically insane.

The war and the peace treaty happened under Democratic Administrations—which is not to say that the Democrats caused the war, any more than the Republicans caused the depression.

Europe was bled white and bankrupt.

Unemployment had set in with the return of the armies to their homes. Social disorders threatened, and governments had no money with which to tide over distress.

New frontiers and new nations had disrupted the old channels of trade.

A new philosophy of national self-sufficiency had been born out of the bitter experience of war.

Religion, respect for law and order, and the will to work had given way to the immorality of disillusionment and despair.

Had we looked at facts, we should have known then that our war debts from the allies were uncollectible, because German reparations were uncollectible.

So We Lived in a World Of Delusions for 10 Years.

Had we looked at facts, we should have known then that the rest of the world would never again take the products of all our surplus acres and all our surplus plant capacity which were put into production by the extraordinary demands of war.

We should have known then that we ourselves faced a difficult task of readjustment to the reduced demand for our farm products and our manufactured goods—a task that would involve the basic choice between national isolation and international rebuilding.

But we realized none of these things.

For ten years thereafter we lived in the dream-world of delusion. And remember:

The war ended in November, 1918. The Republican Administration of President Harding did not begin until March, 1921.

The first two years of our post-war madness were part of President Wilson's Democratic Administration, which, again, is not to say that the Democrats were responsible for that madness.

You remember the sort of madness it was. You remember how we discovered for the first time the game of foreign lending.

"What?" we said, "You say Germany can't pay her reparations? Nonsense! Why, we can lend her the money."

And we did.

And again: "What? Europe has no money with which to buy our exports? Rubbish! We can lend Europe all the money she needs."

And we did.

For a time it really looked as though we could beat the devil around the bush. If Europe did not borrow and buy from us fast enough, so that prices dropped a little, we borrowed and bought from ourselves. And prices went up again.

We had discovered the Midas touch.

All we had to do was borrow and buy. Then prices had to go up—that made profits go up—that justified still higher prices—and that made the elevator boy a millionaire and the banker a "wizard of finance"—and then—carsh! you remember the fall of 1929.

It was Mr. Hoover's misfortune to have taken office in the spring of that year.

Did Mr. Hoover, between March and October, manage to arrange the depression?

Hoover Made Mistakes, But Not the Depression.

Whatever mistakes Mr. Hoover may have made, such as the Farm Board adventure, or whatever else one may find to disapprove of—certainly his mistakes cannot be said to have caused the depression. And, if he made mistakes in dealing with the depression, so did every other statesman in every other country who happened to be in charge at that time. But not every other statesman did the constructive work that Mr. Hoover did, as, for example, in creating the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lighten the unsupportable burden of debt.

Well, then, if Mr. Hoover did not cause the depression, perhaps Mr. Coolidge or Mr. Harding did.

Did they?

One thing they certainly did not do, and that was to create the war and the conditions existing as a result of the war, in which we now know that the depression had its roots.

In dealing with these conditions as they found them, it may well be said that neither Mr. Harding nor Mr. Coolidge realized the dangers toward which we were drifting. It may fairly be said that they, in common with the rest of the American people, were victims of the "New Era" mania.

But who was not?

Did the Democratic opposition see what was coming and warn against it? Did any more than a handful of our economists, business leaders and bankers see what was wrong in the middle twenties?

And if Mr. Harding or Mr. Coolidge had been blessed with the extraordinary wisdom to see, would the American people have listened to them?

It is easy enough now to say that Mr. Coolidge should not have encouraged the rapid rise of security prices. Certainly, it would have been better if he had warned against it. We might not have climbed quite so high in our madness, and had less distance to fall.

But Warnings Would Have Gone Unheeded.

But it would not have prevented our taking our share of a world-wide depression.

Nevertheless, you may say, the fact remains that Mr. Coolidge did not warn us about the rapid rise of security prices in 1926-1927 and 1928.

True enough. And is Mr. Roosevelt warning us about an even more rapid rise in 1935 and 1936?

If so, I haven't heard him.

And so we come to the answer to the question:

"Was the depression caused by Republican mismanagement?"

The answer is that the depression was caused by a great number of factors, most of them having their origin in the war and the post-war madness of people in general throughout the world—factors as much beyond the control of Messrs. Harding, Coolidge and Hoover as the outbreak of the World War was beyond the control of Mr. Wilson.

The answer is that Messrs. Harding and Coolidge did not have the foresight to see what we, in the wisdom of our hindsight, are now able to discern; but also that, had they seen it, the result would not have been vastly different, because a majority of us would not have believed them.

As to Mr. Hoover, having inherited the depression, he was at times too cautious and at times unwise in dealing with it.

To my mind the greatest unwisdom of which Mr. Hoover was guilty was his desire to maintain high and therefore rigid costs and prices. He did not invent this idea, nor was it discarded by his successor. On the contrary, Mr. Roosevelt adopted and amplified it.

But Mr. Hoover was not, I think, defeated in 1932 for his unwisdom. He was defeated for his caution.

The American people wanted action.

Well, they have had action.

Let us now see whether, on the whole, they are better off because of that action, or in spite of it.

Stock Brokers Attack SEC Act In Wright Case

Dozen Traders Fight to Hold Rights as Hearing Is Opened on Firm.

Twelve stock brokers fought yesterday to preserve their privileges on the Nation's major exchanges as the Securities and Exchange Commission opened its proceedings against Charles C. Wright, New York trader.

The hearing promised to be lengthy and complicated. It constituted the second round in the commission's battle against alleged unethical practises in the buying and selling of securities.

The commission recently completed hearings of charges against Michael J. Meehan, New York broker, involving alleged unethical manipulation of Bellanca Aircraft Corporation common stock, but has not yet announced a decision in his case.

It is charged by the commission that Wright, assisted by the brokers of Arnold & Co., successfully boosted the price of Kinner Airplane & Motor Corporation, Ltd., from 46 cents to 60 cents a share.

Deny Unethical Acts.

The brokers deny these was any unethical manipulation and contend the securities and exchange act is unconstitutional.

Under the provisions of Section 3-A of the 1934 securities exchange act, all members and partners of an accused firm would be subject to the penalities laid down by the commission if manipulation is proven. The penalties involve suspension or expulsion from major exchanges.

The members of the accused broker's firm, Wright & Sexton, were present in the crowded room when the hearing started. They included Wright, Jere A. Sexton and George S. Simpson.

Also involved in the cast are the following members of Arnold & Co.: Herbert King, Norman Stern, Roy W. Arnold, Maurice Goodman, E. B. Kaufman, Giuseppe Russo, Samuel Strasbourger, Benjamin H. Arnold and Benjamin F. Goodman.

Wash Sales Claimed.

Commission attorneys said that they would attempt to prove that these dealers engaged in a series of "wash sales" and "matched orders" to boost the price of the stock of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange.

They charged that while the volume of transfers in Kinner common was only 27,000 for the month of August, 1935, before the alleged "rigging" operations began, it jumped to 35,800 for the single day of September 11 and 48,000 on September 13 as the brokers' orders took effect.

They will try to show that the price was lifted as high as 75 cents a share before the insiders in the deal began selling to take their profits.

In contradiction of these charges, counsel for the defendants will attempt to prove that no such alleged manipulative practices occurred but that a wave of interest in the company as well as an upgrade movement in airplane stocks caused the change in sales volume.

Pressman Dies At Home Here; Ill Short Time

James W. Shackelford, 61, a lifelong resident of Washington died yesterday at his home, 1725 Seventeenth street northwest.

Educated in the public schools, Shackelford later enrolled at National Law School, were he remained two years. While studying law he worked in the office of Dean and Himarsch, attorneys.

Forsaking his career as a lawyer he joined The Washington Post as an apprentice pressman in October, 1905. Leaving The Post after five years, he went to the Herald, where he worked for eight years.

In 1918 he was made foreman of the pressroom then printing Capper's Weekly and worked there until 1922, when he became head of the pressroom of the United States News, then the United States Daily.

Shortly before his death Shackelford was attacked with dizzy spells while on duty in the Daily pressroom. He was removed to his home, where he died.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Belle E. Shackleford, three daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Fograty, Mrs. Clara M. Mayo, of Washington and Mrs. Dorothy Lantz, of Philadelphia, Pa., and a brother Charles D. Shackelford, of this city.

Appeals Court Rules Against 7th Street Bank

Assessment on Shares in District Held Illegal; State Law Cited.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday ruled that, in the absence of a "double indemnity" clause in the District code providing for a 100 per cent stock assessment on persons owning shares in insolvent banks, the laws of the State where the bank was chartered will govern.

In so saying, the appellate court probably ruled off the books of the closed Seventh Street Savings Bank many thousands of dollars which Receiver Norman R. Hamilton had sought to collect from the institution's stockholders.

Thes suit involved an assessment of $2,000 against Ida L. Bergling, who owned 20 shares of stock when the bank closed its doors during the March, 1933, banking moratorium, never to re-open as a going institution.

She fought the assessment on the charge that at that time the laws of the District did not provide for a double assessment and that the laws of the State of West Virginia likewise failed to make specific provision for such a charge. Her contention was sustained by the Appeals Court, which held that a prior ruling by it affecting assessments on the closed Potomac Savings bank controlled the case.

In the Potomac bank case, it was shown, theb ank was chartered in Virginia, and while it did business exclusively in the District, was subject to the laws of the State in which it was chartered in the absence of District statutes over-riding the corporation laws of Virginia.

Court Relieves Coal Operators Of Tax Deposit

Makes Adverse Decision on Guffey Law Immediately Effective.

In a ruling saving coal operators from the necessity of depositing taxes under the outlawed Guffey coal act, the Supreme Court yesterday ordered its adverse Guffey decision into effect immediately, instead of in the customary 25 days.

Acting on a petition filed by counsel for the Tway Coal Co., the court took the position that the delay would be costly to the operating companies, who would be forced to pay taxes required by a law now dead.

The Government was given until tomorrow to answer a similar motion by the Carter Coal Co. of Virginia and West Virginia. This company's suit against the Guffey act was the case decided against the Government by the court a week ago yesterday.

Earlier yesterday the National Bituminous Coal Commission had learned it could continue to function along two lines:

1. Investigating the necessity for bituminous production control, and methods of applying such control.

2. The making of complaints to the Interstate Commerce Commission on rates, charges, tariffs or practices in coal transportation deemed necessary to safeguard those engaged in mining, selling, transporting or consuming coal.

Comptroller General John R. McCarl issued the ruling, thus saving the jobs of most, if not all, of the commission's 150 employes.

Rep. Perkins, Here 15 Years, Succumbs at 64

Was Jersey Republican; Ritter Trial Duties Aggravated Illness.

Randolph Perkins, Republican Representative from New Jersey for 15 years, died yesterday in Georgetown University Hospital of a kidney infection. A chronic sufferer, his condition is believed to have been aggravated by arduous duty on the Judiciary Committee in gathering evidence in the impeachment trial of Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter.

Mrs. Louise Perkins, widow of the 64-year-old lawmaker, boarded a train late yesterday bound for the family home at Woodcliff Lake, N. J. Herself a suffered from heart disease, Mrs. Perkins had to be lifted to the train steps from an invalid's chair and was to make the trip lying in bed.

The House adjourned immediately, after convening a few minutes past noon, out of respect to its fifth member to die since the session began.

Representatives Norton, Sutphin, Lehlback and Powers, all from New Jersey, are expected to attend the funeral, which will be held in Woodcliff Lake, probably tomorrow. Arrangements had not been completed last night.

Perkins whose only son is a student at Georgetown University, entered the hospital May 11 and was operated on four days later. He appeared to be recovering, his office said, until Sunday. Death occurred at 7:30 a. m. yesterday.

He was ranking minority member of the Judiciary and Patents committees and, up to the present Administration, was chairman of the Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee. Last week he was renominated, without opposition, for a ninth term from the Seventh New Jersey District.

A lawyer by profession, Perkins' first public office was as Mayor of Westfield, N. J., from 1903 to 1905. During the next two years he served in the New Jersey Legislature. Elected to the house in 1920, he had held his seat ever since.

Besides his wife, Perkins is survived by five children: Mrs. George P. Moody, of Miechel Field, Long Island, who accompanied her mother yesterday to Woodcliff Lake; Miss Grace Perkins, a student at New Jersey College for Women; Misses Eleanor and Cherry, of Woodcliff Lake, and John Randolph.

The body was to be shipped to Woodcliff Lake this morning.

Blind Man Wins $750 Suit; Auto Hit Him and His Dog

Damages of $750 were awarded John F. Davis, 1123 Seventeenth street northwest, in the District Supreme Court when Davis, a blind man often seen in the streets being led by a police dog claimed an automobile driven by Lewis E. Ryan, of 3031 Sedgwick street northwest, struck him and the dog several months ago.

Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer claimed Davis and his dog were two-thirds of the way across the intersection when Ryan's automobile struck them. Davis asserted he suffered a broken leg and other injuries, while his dog, who accompanied him to court yesterday, was badly shaken up.

Tydings Scores Use of D.C. Men On Berwyn Job

Letter to Tugwell Suggests That RA Should Hire Maryland Jobless.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday wrote a letter of protest to Rexford Guy Tugwell, chief of the Resettlement Administration, complaining that employes on the Berwyn project have been hired through the District rather than the Hyattsville employment office.

RA officials, who asked to remain anonymous, stated that skilled labor required on the project has been exhausted in both Prince Georges County and in Baltimore. Moreover, they pointed out, the project was originally intended to furnish employment for District transients, then being turned out of local camps.

Senator Tydings stated in his letter that labor for the project previously has been obtained, first through the Hyattsville office and then from Baltimore.

"Recently, for some reason unknown to me," he said, "there has been a change in this policy, so that several hundred persons recently called were filled through the reemployment office in the District of Columbia instead of through the re-employment office at Hyattsville.

"This means that, despite the fact that this project is located in our State, our unemployed will not be utilized. Also, it is contrary to the very definite oral understanding which has existed since the establisment of that resettlement project between representatives of your service and the county commissioners of Prince Georges."

Tydings stated he has no objection to the RA taking District unemployed when the two Maryland counties are not able to supply the workers.

Romance of Ships and Tea

IN the days before the Panama Canal, Clipper Ships which carried tea from China to America had to go around Cape Horn. There they frequently met with terrific storms, which tested their seaworthiness to the last degree.

•

TO celebrate their 125th Anniversary, a famous Clipper Ship is packed in every carton of House of Lords Tea. This fine brand has been a favorite of Washington housewives for three generations. It is a Ceylon and India tea of highest quality. You'll find House of Lords Tea at all the better grocers.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and wastes out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

Navy Officers Honored At 3 District Functions

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Leland D. Webb Entertain for Group Recently Returned From Tour of Inspection to West Coast.

Three functions at which naval officers were guests of honor, were given yesterday.

The first two were given by Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Leland D. Webb for officers who have just returned from the naval maintenance tour of inspection; and the other, by Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Lisle F. Small, who entertained for a group of officers and their wives who are soon to leave for new stations.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Webb were hosts yesterday afternoon in their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren at a cocktail party given in compliment to the naval officers who have just returned from the naval maintenance tour of inspection which lasted four weeks and took them as far west as Coronado, Calif.

Among the guests who dropped in to welcome the officers were Rear Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Johnson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. E. J. King, Capt. and Mrs. A. B. Cook, Capt. and Mrs. Frank R. McCrary, Capt. J. R. Hornberger, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Arthur Gavin, Lieut. and Mrs. J. B. Moss, Lieut. W. B. Moffatt, jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Montgomery, Mrs. Clayton E. Miller and Mrs. Sheila Crown.

Later in the evening Commander and Mrs. Webb entertained at dinner at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Naval officers who made the tour were Capt. G. R. Crapo and Capt. E. P. Wilson, Commander S. J. Zeigler, Lieut. Commanders Webb, George R. Henderson, D. P. Polatty, J. B. Lyon, L. J. Mazson, and Lieuts. Braxton Rhodes, W. B. Moffatt, Dale Harris, D. B. Hogle, E. T. Neale, R. R. Wolfe and C. Howerton.

Three naval officers who are soon to leave with their wives for new stations, were guests of honor at a dinner at which Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Lisle F. Small entertained in the ballroom at the Shoreham Hotel last evening. They were Capt. and Mrs. Claude A. Jones, who are leaving for New London, Conn.; Commander and Mrs. Claude Gillette, who are going to Bath, Me., and Lieut. Comander and Mrs. J. Oldham Huse, whose new station will be Long Beach, Calif.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Austin Kuhns, of Buffalo; Mr. George Rentschler, of Hamilton, Ohio, and Mr. George Codrington, of Cleveland, all of whom are visiting in Washington.

Joseph Levine Is Guest Artist Of Opera Guild

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Joseph Levine, nephew of Josef Lehvinne and a distinguished pianist in his own right, was entertained last night at a dinner given in his honor by Col. and Mrs. Jeter R. Horton before the program of the Opera Guild, presented in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel at which he was guest artist. Mrs. Horton, who sang the role of the Countess in a scene from "The Marriage of Figaro" (Mozart), was one of several women of Washington society heard in last night's presentation, given for the benefit of tornado sufferers of the South.

M. Levine's playing was, of course, the feature of the evening. The members of the Opera Guild, established a year ago under the direction of Mme. Gurle Luise Correa, who was known as Norma Bellini during her opera career here and abroad, are all amateurs. For all but two of them, last night's performance was their first stage appearance.

Done in Costume.

The scenes were done in costume and some of the voices in the group were unusually pleasing and had dramatic possibilities. Among sopranos was that of Irene Grow, who sang the Bell Song from "Lakme" (Delibes), and among the contraltos, that of Marguerite Monsell, who sang Carmen in the fortune-telling scene.

Mrs. Riley Simrall sang the part of Leonora in a scene from "Il Trovatore" (Verdi) and Mrs. John R. Simmons appeared in the minuet, presented as the finale to the "Marriage of Figaro" scene.

Mr. Levine opened his part of the program with the Chanconne from the Fourth Violin Sonata (Bach-Busoni) which displayed his mastery of technique and offered him scope for employment of his instrument in its full capacity. His interpretation brought all the voices into play like those of a great chorus in which part answers part.

Second Group.

His second group was of Chopin, a Nocturne, a Scherzo in which he made the most of the composer's humor as the music laughed its way down the keyboard; Berceuse, the Revolutionary Etude into which he dashed before the applause had ended, and the exacting Octave Etude in which he gave a brilliant performance.

He concluded with a group of modern works, "Jardins sous la Pluie" and "Clair de Lune" (Debussy), the Ritual Fire Dance of De Falla; "Alhambra" by Cassado and Malaguena, by Lecuona.

The concert was attended by several groups which were entertained at dinner before the program. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nash entertained a party of guests as did Mrs. Geroge T. Marye, Mrs. Richard Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heath, Senator Royal S. Copeland, Senator Hugh Black and Mr. John R. Simmons.

And on arrival, she has the convenience of B & O Motor Coach service, to take her, and her bags, directly from the trainside to 14 places in New York and Brooklyn, without extra charge. No long walks—no steep stairs—no taxis. The convenient way to enter and leave New York.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

New Lotion Transforms Rough and Aging Hands.

By Mignon.

Posed by Katherine DeMille.

THE FIRST SIGNS of age show in the hands, and if you don't begin to do something about them early, when advanced age starts to hover over you, your chances of correcting the tell-tale surfaces are lessened a great deal.

It seems a waste of time to young women who have good hands without troubling about them, to stop and apply creams and lotions. But when you have passed 25 you had better decide to give five minutes out of even the shortest of your days to the care of your hands.

You can keep them white and you can keep them soft. But you can't do it by simply thinking about it. You must do something. There is a new lotion on the market that seems to me to be the answer to all women's prayers for an easy-to-apply, not sticky lotion that will do something for the hands. It is of perfect consistency to suit me, and I have had that same report from everybody who has tried it. It is moderate in price.

There are many lotions that are good, many creams that are excellent, but women have their preferences and some can give more time than others to the care of their hands. This lotion takes the minimum of time, and gives as fine results as anything I have yet used. You can use it summer and winter and the help it gives in softening hands that have become stiff with work, water and wind will react like magic.

Death of Mothers Found Unnecessary

5,000 Die in Canada Each Year; U. S. Tops List.

More than 5,000 children in Canada are left motherless each year as a result of unnecessary deaths in childbirth, according to a recent report of the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare. About 70 per cent of this maternal mortality is of a type that could be greatly reduced by the application of existing medical knowledge, the Council points out.

Of 29 countries that are compared in this report, the United States is at the top of the list, showing more deaths of women in childbirth than any other of the world's leading nations. Canada ranks fifth.

Spring Brides Given Advice By Uncle Sam

Financial Primer Answers Question, "Can Two Live as Cheaply as One?"

Yesterday in the weekly program of the Educational Radio Project of the Department of Interior, a financial primer was broadcast for the benefit of "Bill" and "Judy," a hypothetical engaged couple. While the age-old question, "Can two live as cheaply as one?" was answered negatively, suggestions for making dollars do double duty for "Bill" and "Judy" were given as follows:

Q. What percentage of an income of $125 a month do economists say should be spent on food? A. About one quarter.

Q. What food gives the most food value for the least money the year round? A. Milk.

Q. How can you learn what you are buying from the grocer? A. Packaged foods must be labeled as to ingredients and amount of contents. The intelligent buyer should also learn the grades and standards represented on these labels.

Q. Is it cheaper to own your home or pay rent? A. Economists say, in most cases, it is cheaper in the long run to own your own home. However, there are so many factors to be considered, it is cheaper in some communities to pay rent.

On Buying a Home.

Q. If you buy a home should you pay two, there, or four times your yearly income? A. Most economists recommend spending not more than twice the yearly salary for a home.

Q. Which is cheaper—to save and pay cash, or to buy on the installment plan? A. It costs more to buy on the instalment plan.

Q. Should bank accounts be in the husband's or the wife's name? A. They should be in the names of both the husband and the wife, with right of survivorship. Then, in case of the death of either, the survivor could use the savings without a court order.

Q. If Bill fails in business, can his creditors attach his life insurance and leave Judy penniless? A. No; not if Judy is the beneficiary.

Q. Who should spend more for clothes—the husband or the wife? A. As a rule the wife will spend more, although occasionally, the husband's clothing costs will temporarily exceed the wife's.

Home-Making Comes First.

Q. What investments are safe, pay interest, and are good as cash in emergencies? A. United States Government Savings Bonds, popularly known as "Baby Bonds."

Q. Should home-making or career-making come first? A. Authorities agree, generally, that home-making should come first.

Q. Have young couples a greater chance for happiness by living with the family or sharing a home with another young couple or living alone? A. Their chances for happiness will be much greater if they start life by living alone.

'Galluses' Add Color to Suits

Women Don Gay Galluses To Add Color

Idea Springs From Style Requirements Set by Present Trends.

NOT SATISFIED with copying men's suits, both as to material and styling, the women are now wearing suspenders. They have discovered that galluses not only furnish an added chance to introduce color and swank to the accessory theme, but these dashing skirt "holder-uppers" are exceedingly practical. In the narrow width sizes, chosen to form a daring contrast with the suit and blouse, suspenders present a smart appearance as they flash out from behind an unbuttoned jacket.

The whole idea, designers claim, is not just another fashion whim but springs directly out of style requirements set by the present trends in women's apparel; mannish suits, hence suspenders! Clipping onto the skirt, suspenders hold this garment in line properly, preventing it from acquiring that ungainly "sat-in" look. Incidentally, suspenders are grand acquisitions to accompany culottes, shorts and slacks as well as suits, eliminating the necessity of wearing a belt.

For the white or pastel suit so popular this summer, suspenders may be contrasted with shoes, blouse, gloves or hat, for a startling tricolor scheme. For instance, white suit, aqua marine blouse and brown suspenders. Often these gay accessories are decorative in themselves, as brown suspenders with beige edging, black with white, and so on.

Role of Censor Of Film, Stage Up to Parents

Entertainment of Children May Be Converted to Force for Good.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE STAGE has long been looked upon as one of the important factors influencing the public. So keenly did people appreciate this, that often, history records, the theater has been closed for its supposedly evil influence. The Puritans frowned on every kind of theatrical performance and when they came into power forbade them. At other times the stage has been used as a means of teaching, because it was easily understood and reached a large number of people.

Opinion Divided.

Today the world is divided into two opposing camps. One insists that moving pictures are affecting the mores and morals of the young; the other claims they are harmless. One group would like to see them rigidly censored; the other would give them unlimited license.

Censoring is always dangerous. The restrictions would be better were they applied to the audience, not the show. The only way of applying them to the audience is by educating public taste, beginning with the children. It is the parents and teachers who control the greater half of the movie frequenters, and it is through their influence on the children that any change must come.

May Be Positive Force.

The movie is so new and has developed with such amazing rapidity that the great mass of people has not yet realized the power for good or evil which it may become. Parents send their children or permit them to go to any kind of show on the grounds that what they see cannot hurt them. Perhaps not. But it is true that what they see might be of great help to them. Surely a positive is better than a negative benefit.

Only when parents and teachers, appreciating the value of the movie, select carefully what shows they wish the children to attend, will the public begin to get the full worth of the moving picture.

'Goose Flesh' Satin.

"Goose flesh" is the name of a new slightly pebbled satin recommended for all-season wear. Equally novel is a coin-spotted crepe de chine, which has been treated to give the effect of lacquered satin and waterproofed at the same time.

Mental Strain Often Causes Intestinal Ills

Digestive Tract Is Quickly Affected by Nervous Disorders.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

We have had a good deal to say about the colon, but the subject is well nigh inexhaustible because individuals will persist in misunderstanding this important and much abused structure. As most of us know, the large intestine (colon) extends from the lower right portion of the abdomen upward to the region of the liver, then loops across the body, much like a slack wire, to the neighborhood of the spleen, then turns downward along the left side, forming a plumber's trap into the rectum.

While it is important, the body can get along without it, and in some cases it has been removed entirely and health has been maintained.

Poisons Neutralized.

On the whole the mucous membrane of the colon is quite efficient in preventing the back flow of toxins into the blood. In fact, most of the poisons of protein digestion, if they are formed, either are made harmless by further chemical change or are blocked from entering the circulation. The old bugaboo of autointoxication from the colon becomes less and less important the better we understand digestion. Of course, if poisons are produced in the small intestine, that is quite a different situation, as in that porton of the digestive tract absorption is made much more rapid and it is not provided with safeguards. If the liver, which receives material from the intestine, is not able to neutralize toxins, illness will follow.

The chief secretion is mucus and it serves to facilitate the passage of fecal matter and to protect the bowel lining. It probably acts as a mechanical barrier to infection. While colitis is a real and tangible type of inflammation, the mere presence of mucus does not necessarily mean irritation. Mucus without blood may indicate merely that there is an excess secretion of this substance due to increased activity of the glands.

Sometimes this state of affairs is of nervous origin and it is nearly always desirable to search for a neurosis that may be the basic cause. In fact, many observers have noted that there is usually a history of nervous strain, anxiety, worry, excessive mental effort, family difficulties, etc., connected with intestinal symptoms.

Not infrequently the correction of bad habits about going to stool will completely change the picture. The bowel is most sensitive after a night's rest, and one of the chief causes of constipation is the disregard of nature's call when it comes. If the colon becomes distended from constipation, gas, or any other cause, the fact is telegraphed to the stomach some 20 feet away (via the intestine) with the result that the stomach fails to empty. This means that a chain of undesirable digestive symptoms is inaugurated, including loss of appetite, nausea, or even vomiting. These are generally the first signs observed whenever any type of obstruction forms within the large bowel. Fecal matter lodged in the rectum can bring about symptoms that may exhibit themselves in the upper portion of the digestive tract.

Called a Reservoir.

We may look upon the colon then as a huge reservoir containing dissolved (digested) nutriment and semi-solid residue. During the transit of food through the body it spends approximately four-fifths of its time in the large bowel.

We can wreck the most stalwart physique by deliberately encouraging constipation through stubbornness, heedlessness, or failure to make an opportunity. The habit should be formed of going to stool at the same time each day. As the nerves that govern contraction of the lower bowel may become dulled through neglect, so they become sharpened through regularity and habit. If enemas are required, soapsuds should not be used. Instead, plain water, or dilute salt solution, or a little olive oil will do the trick.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Woman Expresses Desire to Meet Some of "The Charming Men Here With New Deal Agencies."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Without much ado let me come directly to the point and present my life's problem. Naturally it is the same old question: How can I make the acquaintance of men of the type whose company I could enjoy? In all sincerity and without the slightest twinge of conceit I can safely say that I do have quite a bit to offer within myself. I am considered attractive, charming, intelligent, with a pleasant personality and understanding—if I continue I will be listing all the virtues a man could want.

• • • •

I am interested in those things any normal human being enjoys: theater, music, outdoor sports, etc.. I do go out with men and am sociable but I do not meet that other kind—is there that other kind? With all the charming men who must be here with the New Deal organizations I am sure some one of them would be interested in knowing a woman who is wholesome, a good sport and yet very lonely.

• • • •

Although I am Jewish I have the privilege of numbering among my true and real friends some of Washington's foremost citizens, people of social standing and intellectual distinction. It is my desire to make the acquaintance of men in their middle thirties or more; men of good background; men who are distinctly not the "daddy" type who takes such keen delight in being seen with a child of 18 or 20. Miss Haworth, can you offer some good suggestions?

With best wishes for your continued success in your worthy work, I am, sincerely,

THIRTYISH.

• • • •

A Difficult Quest.

DEAR THIRTYISH: If all you have to say of yourself is true; namely, that you have many attractive social qualities, a number of men friends and an acquaintanceship among persons of social standing and intellectual distinction in Washington, it is difficult to understand why it should be at all necessary for you to appeal to this column for advice on how to annex congenial beaux. The problem of how to make friends is one which has been exhaustively considered in this column the last two years and I must admit I have little to add to what I have already said at such length here on this subject.

• • • •

If you are intelligent—and you concede that you are—you know without my saying so that a woman who wishes to attract favorable notice from attractive and eligible men must place herself and keep herself in circulation in the right social circles. In order to do this you must cultivate the friends you already have, trusting that each contact already possessed will in time lead to other and perhaps more fruitful contacts.

• • • •

As for your desire to know more men "in their middle thirties or more; men of good background; men who are distinctly not the 'daddy' type," I believe it is a well-known fact that such men are relatively scarce in the social scene. The majority of attractive men are already married by the time they reach their middle thirties. Those who are unmarried are, as a rule, so complacently aware of their desirability that they can and do pick and choose their feminine companions with the greatest discrimination, and a woman has to be mighty attractive in order to compel from them more than passing notice.

• • • •

It may be the publication of your letter here will result in correspondence from some person or persons who can afford you exactly the type of companionship you wish. Let's hope so.

M. H.

School for Domestics?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to know if there is a school in Washington where one could go to learn domestic service. I am very egaer to learn how to set a table correctly for any occasion and also how to serve dinners, luncheons, etc. Do you know of such a place in this city?

JESSICA.

• • • •

DEAR JESSICA: If you will take your question to Mrs. Irving Ketcham, director of the education department of the local Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, telephone Metropolitan 2102, I am sure she will help you find the answer. When demand justifies, such classes are given at the "Y," although I understand there is no such course there at the moment. However, beginning this week, a maids' training class is being given daily at the "Y" under the auspices of the WPA. While this class is primarily for the benefit of persons on relief rolls, something else along the same line may be worked out for persons who prefer to pay for such training. In any event, Mrs. Ketcham is, in my opinion, the person most conversant with ways and means of obtaining the training you seek. And I am sure she will take a personal interest in helping you get the instruction you want.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. Brenda, broke and at her wits' end, has accepted a job of which she is ashamed—"siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of worthless gold mine stock. Her job is to entertain Jason's prospective victims.

Brenda has been more easily able to deceive Lally about her work because Lally has fallen in love with Val Sargent, brilliant young writer who lives in the apartment above theirs. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret love and knows it is because of Val that Lally is determined on an operation which may enable her to walk. And Brenda knows, too, that Val does not love her sister, but herself. To her, her own feelings in the matter are of no moment. She is solely concerned in protecting Lally and avoids Val. Jason also is in love with Brenda, though she scarcely realizes it. The person who does realize it is Ethel Rush, Jason's woman partner, who loves him.

Tim Brady, Government detective, posing as Carl Orth, sugar planter from the Philippines, is closing in on Jason and Ethel. Brenda has had one engagement with him and he is checking up on her.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN.

TIM BRADY asked the driver to take him for a ride for about five minutes and then drive back to where he had waited before. The driver did as directed, and in five minutes was back, and Brady was getting out of the cab.

Inside the entrance, the Government detective scanned the mail box, a task at which he had been interrupted before when he had noticed Val Sargent standing outside.

He found what he wanted quickly. Brenda Fayre, Laura Fayre, 519. From the 519 box he looked up and saw 619, Val Sargent. The card on 519 was hand written. The card on 619 was typewritten. The manager, Mrs. Moffit, he saw listed for 109.

He didn't take the elevator upstairs to the fifth floor. He took the stairs, and when he was in front of 519, he didn't make any attempt to ring the bell; he simply stared at the number on the door for a moment or so, and then went downstairs again, still by the stairs. This time he stopped at 109 and rang the bell.

Mrs. Moffit welcomed him hopefully. Yes, she had several flats which were vacant. She wanted good tenants, and Mr. Brady certainly looked like a good tenant to her.

They spent quite a bit of time going over the five vacant flats—more than Mrs. Moffit realized, for it appeared after they started that Mr. Brady was very particular about certain details. Privacy, for instance, and light and air. Then, Mr. Brady was such a pleasant gentleman, quiet, but so pleasant. It was a privilege to show him around.

He was so interested in the other tenants, and if he took a flat as he seemed about to do, well, she would have somebody to talk to. She was lonely all day in 109, with nothing to do but to show prospective tenants around, most of them finding fault, most of them wanting newer things, like electric ice boxes, and all tiled kitchens and sunken bathrooms, for $40 and $45 a month.

Pumping.

In one of the vacant apartments Mrs. Moffitt found herself sitting down with Mr. Brady and pouring out some of her troubles to him, the way the mortgage company that owned the Corwin treated her, the trouble she had collecting the rents, the excuses people gave, her hopes that some day she would have a better apartment house to supervise, and tenants who actually, when their rent was due, would pay it without a murmur, send it in advance.

Mr. Brady was sympathetic, extremely so. He couldn't understand why she wasn't allotted a finer apartment, and more money. She deserved it, he said, and she beamed.

When he was gone, she found it was nearly 7, and she was already looking forward to the following day when Mr. Brady said he would make up his mind about one of the vacant flats in the Corwin.

Brady went away, no smile on his face, but an amused twinkle in his eyes. Mrs. Moffit was exactly the sort of person he liked to meet when he wanted information, a person with a grievance. When you got that person, you were lucky. First you found out their grievance, let them talk about it awhile, and then swung into the information you wanted. They never noticed the change in the conversation; they never knew that you were pumping them dry.

Brady had no intention of living at the Corwin, and he had had no such intention when he went in. But he had learned a good deal from Mrs. Moffit about Brenda Fayre, more than he had hoped to get in two weeks.

He knew that until several months ago Miss Fayre had difficulty paying her rent—$40. Oh, she paid it, but in small amounts over the period of a month, $5 now, $2 now, and perhaps $10. Miss Fayre was prompt now, the promptest of tenants, almost a shining example. She paid on the dot, and the whole amount, and what was more, paid by check, a thing which she had never done before.

Things were looking up for the Fayre girls, with the new job of the older Miss Fayre's. Mrs. Moffit was fond of the girls, they were nice girls, and she enjoyed running in to see Lally.

Mrs. Moffit even knew Brenda's salary, $50 a week. Lally had told her. Twice as much as she had been making as a stenographer. She wasn't so definite on Brenda's job. Selling mining stock, she thought, and very good mining stock at that. Gilt edge stock. She had stopped Brenda once and asked her about the stock because she had several thousand dollars that an uncle had left her and she wanted to invest it, but Brenda had said that her company wasn't selling at present.

Mr. Brady knew about the masseuse who came to massage Lally twice a week, and Lally's condition was described to him as only Mrs. Moffit could describe it. All Lally's symptoms, and her agility with her chair, and the sorrow Mrs. Moffit felt at seeing such a lovely girl unable to walk. He knew of Mrs. Moffit's pride, too, that with Brenda's new job and her increased salary that the girls stayed on at the Corwin, a boost for the Corwin, and a decided feather in Mrs. Moffit's managerial cap.

He learned, too, that Mr. Sargent in 619 visited the girls a good deal, and was especially kind to Lally. Mr. Sargent was writing a novel. He had promised Mrs. Moffit an autographed copy of the novel when it was published.

It would be the first autographed book she would ever have, and, strange as it may seem, Mr. Sargent was the only author Mrs. Moffit had ever known, but it was the last time she would permit an author and his typewriter in the Corwin, because she knew now what to expect.

Complaints.

There had been many complaints about Mr. Sargent's typewriter, going at all hours of the day and night, but unfortunately Mr. Sargent had paid six months rent in advance, and she could do nothing about putting him out. Not that she didn't like Mr. Sargent personally. She did, but his authoring and his typewriter she didn't like.

The typewriter had cost her two tenants on the sixth floor, a Mr. Smith who worked nights and wanted to sleep days, and who had occupied 618, and a Mrs. Gray who almost had a nervous breakdown from listening to Mr. Sargent, and who had followed Mr. Smith in 618. Six-eighteen was vacant at present.

Brady knew the exact date of the arrival of the Fayre girls, the exact date that Brenda's new job and salary started.

Also the exact changes the increase in salary had made in the menage of 519.

He made a few notes as he drove back to town in his taxi, and when he got to his hotel, a small one where he was registered neither as T. W. Brady, or as Carl R. Orth, but as B. W. Timmons, Akron, Ohio, he enlarged the notes until he had quite a dossier on Brenda Fayre. When he finished this he took out two more dossiers, one on Ethel Rush, and the other on Walter Jason. These he read over carefully. They weren't complete, but he intended that they should be very soon.

At 8 o'clock, a phone call came from Washington and a moment later he was listening to a cable which had arrived for him from a Government agent in Manila. It was in code, but it took only a little while for him to decode it.

Smarter.

"Cable instructions regarding picture wanted by Walter Jason, Tower Building, Carl Orth. Request came through Curry Picture Service. Referred here, according to orders."

A frown slit Brady's forehead into several different planes. Someone in the Jason office was a little smarter than he had counted on, or perhaps he himself hadn't given Jason the credit that was due him.

In five minutes he had the manager of the local Curry Service at his home and had found out that Miss Ethel Rush was seeking information about Carl Orth, and had especially asked for a picture from Manila.

After his call, he drafted out a cable to the agent in Manila in code, and took it down to the nearest telegraph office himself. The girl at the counter thought it was a message of congratulation, but behind the code were the words, "Better send on picture of me instead of Orth. Deal here may not be closed by time mail gets through."

After sending the cable he went back to his room, and put in a long distance call for Harold Clancy at Yosemite. The call came through surprisingly fast.

"Sorry to disturb you, Mr. Clancy, but I must. Tim Brady speaking. Want to give you a message for Mr. Orth. Tell him to be careful for a couple of weeks yet. I'm right on the verge of my game, but there's been a little slip up, and they're cabling Manila for a picture of Orth. Understand?"

Mr. Clancy understood. He understood all about Mr. Orth's business, because he was Orth's private secretary. He promised to keep his employer quiet for another couple of weeks, said it was no trouble at all, a favor in fact. Mr. Orth was enjoying his alias of T. W. Brady. Anything else they could do they would do gladly, for they still remembered the favor Mr. Brady had done them in Manila. Mr. Orth frequently talked about it.

Nothing else, no. Things were coming along in good shape. The deal should be completed in a couple of weeks, not more than three, at the most.

Brady got back to his dossiers when he finished with Clancy, but the frown remained on his forehead. At least half a dozen times before he had impersonated Carl Randall Orth—a good impersonation because Mr. Orth seldom came to the States, and yet his name was well known in banking circles and especially valuable in gold stock cases. But this was the first time that Mr. Orth had been present in America while Brady was using his name.

WHO SERVES PROGRESS SERVES AMERICA!

Millions of Jobs in the rebuilding of the nation!

THIS MONTH a notable array of new names is added to the roll call of famous American trains powered by Diesel engines of General Motors design – trains signaling something vastly more important than a great stride forward in railroad operation: the onward march of America itself.

Running between Chicago and Los Angeles on a new regular schedule of 39 hours 45 minutes is the new Union Pacific Streamliner CITY OF LOS ANGELES – powered as are all the other trains mentioned here, by Electro-Motive Corporation, a GM subsidiary – using Winton-Diesel engines.

Likewise cutting a business day from the running time between Chicago and the Coast is the equally fast schedule of the new Santa Fe SUPER CHIEF – sped by a 3600 horsepower twin-unit Diesel locomotive.

And on the heels of these two announcements, comes the proposed launching of the new CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO by the Union Pacific early in June – companion train to the CITY OF PORTLAND, M-10001, pioneer 39¾-hour train to the Far West – as well as new Union Pacific and Burlington trains, to be put in daily service between Chicago and Denver on a 16-hour schedule – approximately 10 hours faster than present running time.

This steady parade of new names finds brilliant precedent in such popular trail-blazers as the veteran Burlington ZEPHYR and the TWIN ZEPHYRS in service between Chicago and Minneapolis – the M-10000 of the Union Pacific – the FLYING YANKEE of the Boston & Maine – the GREEN DIAMOND of the Illinois Central and the ABRAHAM LINCOLN of the Baltimore & Ohio-Alton.

Not only have these trains established notable savings in operating costs, and savings in running time by stepped-up schedules – they have spectacularly increased passenger traffic and revenues as well.

Yet the real significance of these new-day Diesel trains – with their modern styling, their air-conditioned comfort, their important savings of time and cost, their spectacular increase in passenger revenues – extends far beyond the field of railroading or of transportation.

They token the limitless possibilities for multiplying jobs, for creating new work, for producing new wealth by industrial advancement – and by the results already attained, they once more vividly demonstrate that opportunity has no ceiling in America.

A vast part of this opportunity today lies in replacing the old with the new – of putting to work the tremendous advances in technology sweated out by the partnership of industry and science, intensified during the years of depression – the job of rebuilding America.

The way to increase employment is to create more jobs by making existing goods and services constantly better – greater in value – lowering their cost, not by reducing wages but by greater efficiency, advanced technology and better management. And not only by thus building better the things of today but by pioneering new things to build tomorrow and by making all things more attractive and more desirable, we create wider markets.

Backers Ask Rider Repeal Vote June 8

Walsh Expects Senate Ballot on Measure in Next Week.

By James D. Secrest.

A new move to enact the Sisson bill, repealing the "Red rider," despite the surprise setback received by its supporters yesterday, was started last night with time and apparent sectional prejudice as obstacles.

The House adjourned shortly after convening, due to the death of Representative Perkins (Republican), of New Jersey. The District thereby was deprived of another legislative day—the third in six weeks.

Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, refused to be discouraged by the latest stumbling block, however, and predicted that the repeal measure will be voted upon in the House before adjournment.

Undaunted by the House delay, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, stated he was preparing to report the companion Wheeler bill and would try to call it up for a Senate vote this week.

Appeal to Senate.

District civic and educational organizations turned their appeals forthwith to the Senate, while Sisson admitted that passage of the bill in the Senate would make his task easier the House.

Apparent sectional prejudices in this campaign year and the efforts of House leaders to prevent a vote on the Sisson bill and consequent embarrassment to certain members appeared the greatest obstacles to sponsors of the repeal bill.

Speaker Byrns, who is known to be personally opposed to the Sisson measure, refused to promise any substitute District day before Congress adjourns.

He and Majority Leader Bankhead flatly refused to give the word by which Chairman Norton of the House District Committee might expect to get a special rule, assuring House action.

June 8 Next Day.

The only hope, it appeared, was that Congress might remain in session until June 8, when the District is entitled to another day in the House. House leaders were becoming more inclined to the view that such would be the case, although they have set June 6 as the goal.

Many school teachers were in the visitors' gallery when the House met at noon yesterday as the Sisson bill was to be the special order of business.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, author of the rider, appeared in the chamber loaded with books, pamphlets and other data. He grinned broadly when he learned the House was to adjourn.

Mrs. Norton was not so optimistic as Sisson last night regarding the possibility of calling up the bill at this session.

"I shall not rest until it becomes a law, however," she stated. "If we don't get it through this year, it will be the first order of business of the District Committee next session."

Agrees With Sisson.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who conducted the public hearings on the bill, agreed with Sisson that favorable action may be had before adjournment and sponsors of the measure should fight to the last day.

House leaders, when questioned regarding the cancellation of another District day, sought to pass the buck to the House membership and to the Senate. They pointed out that another District day could not be set aside before June 8 except by unanimous consent or by a special rule. The former is impossible, everyone conceded, while the latter they would not approve.

"Why doesn't the Senate pass the bill first?" Byrns asked.

When told that it might and asked if he would then permit the measure to be called up, he refused to make any promises.

Law Student Is Nominated As Prosecutor

FLOYD E. HARPER.

Floyd E. Harper Will Be Graduated in June, but Gets Grpi on Job.

Floyd E. Harper isn't a lawyer yet but it looks as if he has a good grip on a job as prosecutor.

Harper, who is 24 and lives at 4900 Third street northwest, is a student at National University Law School. Although he is not expected to be graduated until this June, he recently took leave of absence from his Government job here to go home to Tipton, Ind. There he filed for the Democratic nomination for prosecuting attorney for the Thirty-sixth Judicial District.

He won the nomination and by a thumping plurality of 900.

As the district is normally Democratic by a good majority, Harper said yesterday that he felt that the nomination was tantamount to election.

Once he is graduated next month, he plans to take the bar examination in Indiana and thus be qualified to take over the prosecutor job after the election in November.

Harper came to Washington in 1933 to work in the office of Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana. Later he obtained a position in the General Accounting Office and began studying law at night.

He has a B. S. degree from Central Normal College in Indiana. While working for Senator Van Nuys, he served as chairman of the executive board of the Capitol Hill Democratic Club. In that role he sharpened the oratorical powers which he used on the voters in Tipton's recent primary.

Cathedral Drive Brings In $16,000

Approximately $16,000 has been raised thus far by officials at Washington Cathedral in their drive toward a goal of $25,000 for maintenance and support of work there, it was announced yesterday.

The present campaign is led by Robert B. Wilson, Mrs. Charles Warren, Richard W. Hynson, H. L. Rust, jr., and William R. Castle.

Wed Worker Clause Faces Action Today

House, Group to Decide on Special Rule for Celler Bill.

The House Rules Committee today will decide whether to grant a special rult for the Celler bill to repeal the "marriage clause" provision in the economy act of 1932.

President Roosevelt yesterday added his indorsement to the move to repeal the famed Section 213 provided the substitute statute, limiting the combined salaries of husband and wife in Government service to $4,000, is adopted.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, appeared before the Rules Committee in support of his request for a special rule.

He pointed out that the "marriage clause," a relic of the depression, had outlived its usefulness, of any, and has proved unfair to the lower salary brackets. Married persons in the higher salary groups, he explained, have escaped the penalty of the law.

Opposing the Celler bill was Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, who insisted that this is not the time for repeal as the Federal departments have too many employes already.

The amended Cellar bill repeals section 213 of the 1932 act and amends section 9 of the Civil Service act of January 16, 1883, by inserting the fololwing:

"Provided, that no original appointment to one of said grades may hereafter be approved in any case where the combined salaries of the members of a family after such appointment would equal or exceed $4,000.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, yesterday announced that both the Democratic and Republican parties will be urged in their June conventions to write into the platforms strong planks on civil service.

"Forthright platform statements calling for the extension of the Federal merit system to cover all positions save those of a policy-making nature wil lbe urged," he said.

Lillian Maddock Asks Jury Trial; Posts Bond

Pleading not guilty with two other women to a charge of maintaining a disorderly house, Lillian Maddock, recently freed in the killing of Edwar V. (Eddie) Killeen, former Washington gambler, demanded a jury trial yesterday.

Arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt, Mrs. Maddock was released under $500 bond. The other women are Hannah Edwards and Louise Anna Porter. They also were freed on the same bail.

The three women were arrested Saturday night when Policeman Roy E. Blick raided a house in the 1400 block of R street northwest.

They Laugh Because He Can't Even Get 'Phthisic' Right; 17 to Enter National Contest This Morning.

A reporter tried to assume the role of speller yesterday. He regretted the step.

If the reporter had stuck to his job of interviewing, all would have been well, but as things happened, he didn't.

I the lobby of the Hamilton Hotel the interviewer met Charles Edwards, 12, and four other young boys and girls who are here to participate in a Nation-wide spelling bee.

The reporter lined the children up and decided to hold a little pre-contest spelling bee. The children didn't mind. They just smiled and looked at each other.

The rest of the kids looked at the man the city editor sent around as though he were crazy, asking them words like:

"Criterion, innuendo, hypothesis and tuberculosis."

They were too easy.

The reporter, who always gets mixed up with "i's" and "e's" in receive, kept on popping words to the children. He really didn't know whether they were spelled right or wrong. But he had to do something.

Finally it got pretty monotonous—all those kindergarten words—and Charles asked the reporter:

"How about you spelling some?"

The reporter said all right and was sure they'd ask a word like hippopotamus or some other tricky word he spent our days learning in grammar school.

But Charles looked serious and said something that sounded like "tizi."

The reporter thought he must have been mistaken and asked:

"Physics?"

Charles said no.

The reporter turned red behind the ears and all the chlidren giggled and the reporter knew he was making an awul fool of himself.

He started:

"T . . ." pause . . . "I . . ."

The children howled. The reporter started to start over again and a painful silence ensued.

The reporter said, "I give up," and felt terribly embarrassed. "You spell it."

Charles said, "Phthisic." Upon questioning he said something about disease—medical book—but there were some grown people in the room and they were laughing too and the reporter decided he better get out.

They explained the word was a medical term—that it wasn't in the dictionary.

But the reporter didn't wait. He just eased out the door, remembering what he heard once:

4 Are Charged With Assault In Strike Here

Mechanics Walk Out in 12th Concern; Worker Says He Was Attacked.

Arrests loomed in Washington's automobile mechanic strike last night as labor troubles spread to a twelfth auto concern and assault warrants against four alleged strikers were issued in Police Court.

Reports of violence entered the dispute for the first time when it was charged that the four men entered the Mandell Chevrolet Co., Thirteenth street and Good Hope road southeast, Thursday and "started trouble." Harry L. Ferguson, an employe of the Mandell shop, yesterday obtained warrants naming George Berry, 800 block Portland street southeast; L. Kane, 1300 block Massachusetts avenue northwest; H. D. Kane, 1300 block M street northwest, and E. K. Sherman, 1700 block Sixteenth street southeast.

The four men, it was claimed, attacked Ferguson and knocked him down in the Mandell garage. They formerly had been employed there, it was reported.

Oliver N. Garrison, business manager of the International Machinists Union, told a different story, however. He said the four men entered the shop with permission of the manager to obtain overalls and tools. When they got inside, he said, Ferguson "made a pass at them" and the trouble started.

Meanwhile, the strike spread yesterday to the shop of H. B. Leary, Jr., & Bros., 1620 U street northwest. Several men walked out, it was reported. Union officials estimated that 229 men are now on strike.

Pepco Asks $15,000,000 Bond Issue

Part of Proceeds Would Be Used to Pile Up Surplus Profit.

3¼% Interest Rate Is Offered; Roberts to Urge Local Sale.

Approval of a $15,000,000 bond issue was asked yesterday by the Potomac Electric Power Co. of the Public Utilities Commission.

The transaction is a major one among District utilities, and the effect of the proposition, which eventually will be worked out and approved by the commission, will affect consumer interests in the future.

The $15,000,000 in bonds would be made a first lien on the company, would bear 3¼ per cent interest per year and mature in 1966.

Proceeds from the sale would go partially to retire outstanding bonds, bearing higher interest rates, and add to the public debt of the company for improvements already made and paid for but not covered by bonds, and to pile up in the treasury of the company close to $8,000,000 surplus profit which would be ready for division among stock holders ahead of the effective date of whatever tax bill the Senate might approve.

Series of Conferences.

Submitted by Dr. William McClellan, president of the company, after a fortnight of private conferences with Public Utilities Commission officials, the company proposition said that bids from at least three persons or concerns, to market the bonds financially independent of it, would be submitted to the commission.

That the bonds would be welcomed by investors was forecast in a statement by William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

Roberts said he hadn't had time to study the company proposition but he would seek to persuade the company to give local capital a chance to invest. The Potomac Electric Power Co., along with most local utilities, is controlled by the nationally powerful utilities holding company, the North American.

Proceeds from the $15,000,000 first mortgage, 30-year bonds, Dr. McClellan said, would be used for various purposes. The sum of $3,922,000 would be used to buy from the public holders that amount of the face value of 5 per cent interest bonds which are to mature on July 1. Of the $7,000,000 total of that issue the company already has bought in at varying market prices the remainder of $3,078,000. This $3,078,000 is in the company treasury.

To Buy From Public.

Six per cent bonds, which do not become due until 1953, also are to be retired with the proceeds of the proposed $15,000,000 issue. It is proposed to buy from the public, at a premium price of 105, the entire public holding of $3,264,000 of these bonds.

The company also would retire at at par, that is $100 fo rthe arbitrary $1,000 par value fixed, some $1,760,000 of these bonds which the company bought at varying market prices. Under the sinking fund provision of these bonds, it also was required to acquire a certain amount of them annually. The sinking fund acquisition amounts to $735,100 par value. These bonds all are to be retired at par value, regardless of the depreciated prices at which the company bought them in the open market during the depression.

The company proposes to turn into its treasury another $2,240,000 of the proceeds of the proposed bond sales as reimbursment for improvements to its plant. Funds for the improvements have come from customers and have not been contributed by investment by persons with surplus capital.

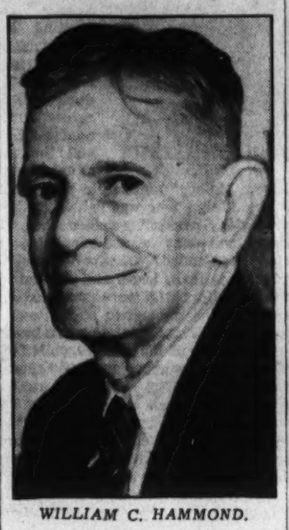
Man Who Made Postal History Here on a Visit



WILLIAM C. HAMMOND.

William C. Hammond, who made the Postmaster General spend 10 cents for a postage stamp in 1919, is in town today.

Hammond's getting old now. He's 69, but he claims he's as young as he was the day he stood in front of the Old Postoffice nad sold the first parcel post stamp ever printed toP ostmaster General Albert Burleson.

He sold one to William G. McAdoo.

Hammond now is a resident of the Naval Home in Philadelphia. He was born in Washington and lived here many years.

As a boy he went to sea—to the Philippines in a wooden windjammer, to China, and rounded Cape Horn in a wallowing sailboat.

Then he came to Washington to work for the Government. For 28 years he stayed behind the scenes in the postoffice handling letters. He is now visiting friends here.

The highlight of his career was that day in August, 1919. Today, he introduces himself:

Cocktail parties and dunking should be in the same class—unfashionable, according to the American Automobile Association Women's Safety Committee.

Meeting yesterday at the Sulgrave Club, the committee branded cocktail drinking as a "menace to civilization and safe driving." They urged that cocktail parties be made as "out of date as square dances and doughnut drinking."

George Offutt, chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board addressed the meeting, tracting the rise and fall of arrests for intoxication before and after prohibition.

"Enforcement of the liquor laws," said Offutt, "is closely comparable to enforcement of traffic laws. We must get voluntary co-operation by 80 per cent of the people and visit the full strength of the law on the other 20 per cent who refuse to observe regulations."

Test Station For D. C. Gas Is Planned

The Public Utilities Commission moved yesterday to make certain that consumers of gas from the east plant of the Washington Gas Light Co. get the required minimum standard of heat quality in their gas.

The east plant, which steadily has been becoming the most important production unit of the gas companies, is located on the Anacostia River, east of the Navy Yard, and the heating quality of its product heretofore has not been tested before its gas becomes mixed with gas from the west plant, located in Georgetown.

A new continuous testing station and laboratory is to be located by the commission at 418 Tenth street southeast. This station is to tap the mains from the east plant, where gas is manufactured and the artificial water gas, enriched by oil, is further enriched by the mixture of natural gas. The natural gas has a much higher heating quality than the manufactured gas.

A minimum of 600 British thermal units, commonly referred to as B. T. U., is required for all gas sold in the District. This is high requirement for manufactured gas, but is low for natural gas. About 400 thermal units would be normal for an artificial gas, without enrichment with oil. The natural gas which now is piped into Washington runs around 1,100 units.

Importance of the new testing station was emphasized by commission officials and by William A. Roberts, people's counsel. Roberts pointed out that consumers were interested not in purchasing so many cubic feet of gas, as such, but in getting so much heating power for their money. The new testing station, he said, would give the commission information which would enable it to check the quality of the east plant gas to make certain it complied with the minimum thermal unit requirements fixed by the commission for the safeguard of the consumer. He pointed out that the commission had made allowance for the 600 B. T. U. requirement in fixing rates of the local gas companies.

Brief Prevues Of Film Plays On West Coast

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 25.—Picketing the prevue parade—best of the week: "The Green Pastures" (Warner Bros.). "Pastures" scores with accurate translation to the screen of the benign stage whimsy on a simple Negro preacher's interpretation of the Bible.

The picture is a personal triumph for Marc Connelly, who wrote the play, inspired by Roark Bradfords' book, "Ol' Man Adam and His Chillun," adapted it for the movies, and shared direction with William Keighley.

Throughout it maintains a dignity, pathos and gentle humor that places it above criticism on religious grounds. Exposition begins with a Negro preacher (George Reed), explaining biblical history to his Sunday school class, as in the stage play. It proceeds with action in illustration of his words, occasionally flashing back to expressions of his young listeners, which are priceless.

Acting honors go to Rex Ingram, passive Negro who plays "De Lawd," harassed by the peccadillos of his no-account creatures on earth. Ingram also doubles as "Adam" and "Hezdrel."

Oscar Polk is a bit too obsequious as "Gabriel," but Eddie Anderson and Frank Wilson are swell as "Noah" and "Moses." The Hall Johnson Choir is tops in "Heavenly" spirituals, and the photography is excellent.

Leisurely pace and lack of climax are unusual, and may puzzle movie audiences.

One We Have Seen.

"The King Steps Out" (Columbia). Grace Moore, who previously depended largely on her voice, steps out surprisingly as a dramatic actress in this romantic musical comedy. Her love scenes with Franchot Tone, cast as the debonair young monarch of a German kingdom, have got that something.

It's just as well for the box office that La Moore chose this moment for emerging, because the Fritz Kreisler music, technically admirable, is not of the popular hit type, and probably won't send audiences away humming.

Story is the familiar tale of the king betrothed to a princess he has never seen by his virago mother. He steps out for some incognito fun and falls for a pretty commoner, who inevitably turns out to be a royal gal and a sister of his fiancee.

Two to Come.

"Fury" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer). A grim, depressing preachment against mob violence is given Fritz Lang, two-monocled Austrian director, for his first American picture, and he squeezes from it the last ounce of bitterness.

Spencer Tracy and Sylvia Sidney gave impressive performances in the principal roles, of the man persecuted by the mob and his faithful sweetheart. Walter Abel distinguishes himself as a prosecuting attorney and Bruce Cabell as an inciter of the mob.

"Bullets or Ballots" (Warner Bros.). A better title would have been just plain "Bullets." Attractions are Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell and a story that is neither fish nor fowl. Based on an incredible police war against rackets controlled by bankers, it is not an expose, has no mystery, no romance and no personal publicity for G-men.

National

"TOBACCO ROAD." Jack Kirkland and Sam H. Grisman present the play in three acts by Jack Kirkland, based on the novel of the same name by Erskine Caldwell. Return engagement, opening Sunday night, in the National Theater.

THE CAST.

Dude Lester	Donald Barry
Ada Lester	Mary Servoss
Jeeter Lester	MR. HULL
Ellie May	Pauline Drake
Grandma Lester	Hallene Hill
Lov Bensey	Leon Ames
Henry Peabody	Dick Lee

Beginning the second successive week of its return engagement and its third in Washington since April 5, "Tobacco Road," Jack Kirkland's dramatization of the novel of Georgia's "bresh country" by Erskine Caldwell, resumed its triumphant career in the National Capital in the National Theater last night.

Assailed by some as a complete distortion of conditions as they actually exist among the cotton sharecroppers of the backwoods South, and lauded by others as an honest and salutary exposition of deplorable conditions of living that are a blot on any land, this provocative play, regardless of the point of view, is a vivid and stirring document.

Sordid, earthy and profane, "Tobacco Road" has the courage to attack an abominable condition with a frankness and tragic fearlessness that leave an indelible imprint upon human consciousness. It leavens the morbidity of its depressing theme with flashes of a crude and homely humor, indigenous to the pitiful types living their lives of deprivation and squalor along the byways of a little-known sector of American rural life.

The principal role of Jeeter Lester, thoroughgoing scamp, scallawag and scavenger, is played by Henry Hull, who created the part on Broadway, with a comprehensive grasp of every shady ramification of a sly and conscienceless character. His work leaves the tatterdemalion figure of the blasphemous son of the soil burned deeply in memory. In the opposite part of his wife, Ada, Mary Servoss etches a bit of portraiture hardly less striking.

About The Showshops

ESCAPING from the seeming 110 degrees of yesterday's midday sun to the comparative frigidity of the desk's comfortable 98, it was a pleasure to find awaiting me Miss Alva Joesting and her sister, Marjorie, both ardent devotees of the theater in all its manifestations, and Marjorie a former practioner of the footlights' beguiling arts, who now is the wife of Arthur Lange, muscial conductor on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot at Culver City, Calif. Mr. Lange's most recent triumph, it will be recalled, was the musical direction of "The Great Ziegfeld."

BELL.

After reminiscence had recalled the old days of the St. Patrick Players, the Atlantic City Beauty Pageants, in one of which Marjorie Joesting was the "Miss Washington, D. C.," "Honeymoon Lane," the Eddie Dowling musical comedy in which she appeared, and which served as the medium of Kate Smith's introduction to the Broadway stage; the managerial career of Corbin Sheild, former local theater manager now on the West Coast, and this, that and the other, conversation finally and inevitably got around to that "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" number in the "Ziegfeld" picture.

Mrs. Lange, who was "glued to the set" throughout the filming of that prodigious number, recalled that "The Great Ziegfeld"—almost three hours long—was deemed completed and was previewed before "A Pretty Girl" was added. Despite the fact that it rolled the picture's running time up to three hours and four minutes, it was "kept in" by demand of the exhibitors who were consulted in the matter. She also remembered many of the difficulties encountered in synchronizing and filming this huge, spectacular number on its revolving stage.

The timing of the counterpointed classics with the basic melody of the "Pretty Girl" number and their synchronization with the revolving stage was a real problem. The trick was to make the stage present the proper group of principals to the audience at exactly the instant its given music was heard. This involved minute timing of the speed of the stage with the measures of such standard compositions as the "Humoresque," "Vesti la Giubba," "One Fine Day," "Rhapsody in Blue," and so on through the list. Sit down with a pencil and paper and figure it out for yourself!

One morning at a little after 3 a. m. by the clock, when everybody thought they had it, after an all-day and all-night rehearsal, the whole thing went haywire. So they tore into it again and stayed with it until it was right. And how right it was, as it finally came out on the screen!

Mrs. Lange will be a Washington visitor for several days longer—having already seen the Broadway hits—and then will motor back to the Coast with friends.

Speaking of music, the Radio City Music Hall Glee Club, which has proved one of the most popular stage attractions of the season at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater this week, will be held over for a second week, beginning Friday, according to announcement made yesterday afternoon. An entirely new program and routine will be presented next week under the skillful direction of Miss Vin Lindhe, who exercises a magic control of her 24 young vocalists without the aid of a baton. The screen attraction for the new week at the Earle will be "It's Love Again," starring Jessie Matthews, the British star, whose likeness adorns this page today. Miss Matthews is wearing her nuderess!

We are indebted to the thoughtful Mr. Ray Henderson, peer of the theater's stentors, for a handsome brochure devoted to "Katharine Cornell—a gallery of stage portraits."

With a front-cover portrait of Miss Cornell in the cape and armour of St. Joan, the plate-paper booklet contains a stunning head of the first lady of the theater, as she is in persona propria, and character studies of her in "Little Women," "A Bill of Divorcement," "Will Shakespeare," "Casanova," "Candida," "The Green Hat," "The Letter," "The Age of Innocence," "Disonored Lady," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Lucrece," "Alien Corn" and "Romeo and Juliet." Then there are an informal camera study of Miss Cornell and her husband, Guthrie McClintic, and "The ugly duckling and her mother."

More eloquent than a million words in its revelation of the versatility of this brilliant actress, I am happy and grateful to be able to add this handsome little volume to my library of the theater.

With Carter Barron piloting John Boles through the Virginia tidewater country, and Gene Ford engaged with his official duties at Loew's Fox, Mrs. "Chic" Barron and Mrs. Katherine Ford, relieved for a night from the responsibility of being producer of the Young Democrats' "Kapital Kapers," practically broke their necks Sunday night to get down to the National to see "Tobacco Road"—only to find that the house was dark for the first time on a Sabbath evening since the piece first played here April 5. So they went to see "Show Boat" at the "opposition"—which, "Chic" being a Georgian, perhaps was just as well!

Carry-Me-Back-to-Old-Virginny Note.

Mention of "Tobacco Road" reminds me that any peaceful, country byway would look pretty good at the moment. The boys with the automatic drills are taking up the car tracks just outside the office window.

The Gospel Truth.

Hollywood, May 25.

Greta Garbo has taken a house in the valley and is no longer at her Brentwood home . . . Garbo is relaxing in the sunshine. As one wag put it, to regain her pallor . . . George Brent has been visiting here. George S. Kaufman arrives in Hollywood on Thursday. He will work for two weeks on the latest Marx Bros. flicker, which is a race track story. The working title is "A Night at the Horse Oper." . . . Kaufman's play, written with Edna Ferber, is called "Stage Door," and the main character is said to be a combination of Marc Connelly, Clifford Odets and Jed Harris . . . When the "Marry the Girl" company was on location, Robert Taylor visited the set to see Barbara Stanwyck and Jeannette MacDonald visited the set to see Gene Raymond. The next evening Miss MacDonald was at the Trocadero with Nelson Eddy . . . A newcomer to the cinema city remarked, "Hollywood is a great set, but a bad scenario."

BARRI7.

Sat in the projection room Friday afternoon with Elaine Barrie and watched the screen test, a scene from "Dinner at Eight," she made with John Barrymore . . . The test is surprisingly good, for Miss Barrie has an understanding of the lines and delivers them with more dramatic ability than you'd suspect . . . It was interesting to watch her playing with Barrymore. Miss Barrie said that as well as she knows Barrymore, she was nervous playing a dramatic scene with him. She said that he made an effort to throw the scene to her, trying to stay in the background, which is unusual for Barrymore . . . Benny Baker asked Solly Violinsky if he saw him in the flicker, "Drift Fence" . . . "No," answered Solly, "but I saw the thriller, and it dragged a little."

MARLENE DIETRICH'S favorite escort these evenings is Director Fritz Lang . . . Moss Hart has a theory that his car hates him . . . Ceasar Romero and Betty Furness have resumed their dancing romance . . . When the play, "Ethan Frome," was produced they decided that the farmer should wear an exact copy of a 50-cent blue denim shirt. The costume designer copied the 50-cent shirt at a cost of $18.50 . . . The Glenda Farrell combination is now Sam Engel, the scenario writer, instead of Addison Randall . . . Marc Lachmann is handling the exploitation for the Charles Rogers' special productions . . . Harold Arlen and Yip Harburg have written a stirring song, "The New Parade," for the flicker, "Stage Struck." . . .

Lew Brown became friendly with an actor who has been out of work . . . Brown took him to dinner, then got the actor a room at a hotel, paid his rent, and also got him a job in a picture . . . Grover Jones, the character the scenario writer in "Boy Meets Girl" is modeled after, went to New York because he is in a situation which could be an incident in the play . . . Jones wrote the scenario for the flicker, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and the estate which owns that novel intends to sue Paramount . . . Jones' defense will be that he never read the book, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and that he never heard the play—because he didn't want the book and the play to influence him when he wrote the scenario of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." . . . When Billy Wilkerson was at the Grosvenor House in London he picked up the telephone and asked the hotel operator for the time. She said, "Do you mean right now?"

Benefit Group's Dance Recital Scores Success

Classic and popular dance forms blended in a novel two-part program last night at the Wardman Park Theater, when the Bekefi-Deleporte Institute presented its annual recital. 'Les Millions de'Arlequin," the tragi-comedy ballet in two acts by Richard Drigo, and "Dance Monopoly," an "original" musical comedy in four acts of dancing were the two offerings by the students.

Had only the Drigo ballet been presented, the performance would have been memorable. The delicate story of the love of Harlequin for Columbine and of Pierrot for Pierrette, rising to its tragic climax and then resolving in its happy ending, was tastefully presented and colorfully staged.

Lila Zapliski and Margaret Mary Edmonston enacted the major romance, with Ronnie Cunningham and Theodore Bekefi the minor one, all with precision and skill. Other principals included Virginia Barry, as the Good Fairy; Charles Kay, as Cassandre, and Walter Doe, as Leandre.

Score Lilting.

With a lilting score, which Mme. Marie Zapliski executed masterfully at the piano, and many solo and ensemble routines of traditional ballet steps, the drama was indeed a thing of grace and beauty.

Part two of the recital was "Dance Monopoly," conceived by and staged under the supervision of Maurice Deleporte. Ruth Perrott coached the dialogue, while Billy Lytell coached the tap routines and Deleporte the acrobatic numbers. Nan Doe played the piano accompaniment, selected from popular songs.

Here, through the lines of Miss Edmonston, Doe and Lytell, the story of a search for novelty is presented, with diversion taking the form of many tap and acrobatic dance routines set against "State Fair" and "Playground of the World" scenes.

Although these particular routines were well executed, it was the "Savage Isle" scene which definitely marked the high spot of part two. To the "Ritual Fire Dance" music from DeFalla's "El Amor Brujo," there was presented a Samoan gesture dance which climaxed in a striking routine by Deleporte as Shiva, the God of Fire. Assisting was an ensemble of worshipers and two sacrifices.

Smoothly Presented.

Repetition marred the second part, for little ingenuity save in costuming was manifest in the several numbers, yet, in spite of this—and the seeming interminability of the show—the entire program was one of high merit, the most smoothly presented and most expertly performed recital of this spring season.

Among those participating in the evening's kermess were:

Flier's Wife Killed Self, Police Hold

Chicago, May 25 (AP).—After two sessions of questioning Oliver Armbruster, 42, with a "lie detector," prosecutors announced today they accepted his story that his wife shot herself fatally yesterday, though convinced the full account of the quarrel had not been given.

Armbruster was taken to the State attorney's office for further quizzing after maintaining his last version of the Sunday shooting was correct during the "lie detector" tests.

It was that Wilma, his wife of two months, repentant after he had found her drinking in a tavern with a strange man, had seized his gun and shot herself in the head.

Just before she had killed herself, Armbruster, a former World War aviator, had fired the gun to show her it was dangerous, he told authorities. In his first statement, he had said he had "dared" her to carry out her threat of suicide during a quarrel; in a later version, e had declared he thought she was "bluffing" throughout.

'Lovable Women' Called Nazi Need

Berlin, May 25 (AP).—Nazi Germany wants "women we can love," Rudlph Hess, deputy of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, earnestly told 20,000 feminine listeners tonight in the big Deutschland Halle.

"That means not the gretenen type, represented abroad as a somewhat thickheaded and unintellectual being," Hess continued, "but a woman intellectually capable of standing behind a man in his struggle for existence and who can make his life more beautiful."

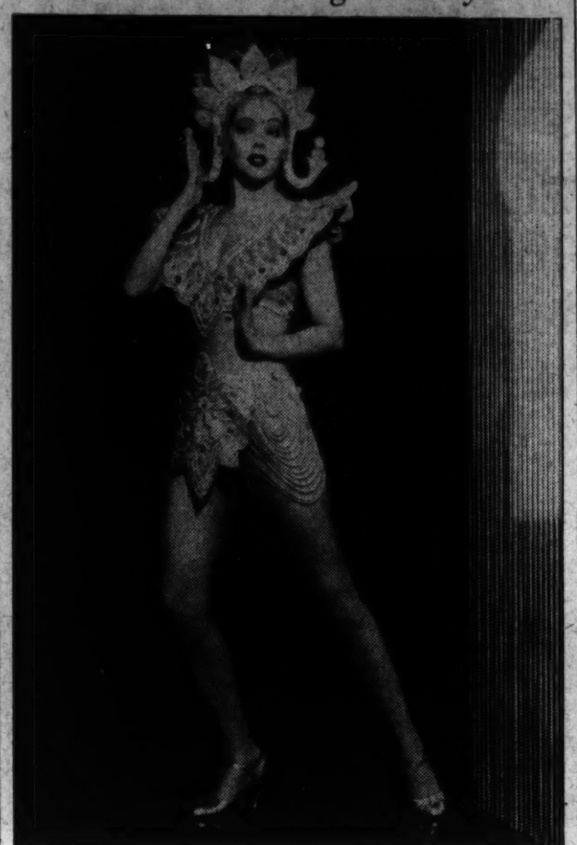
"She must be a woman who above all is also capable of being a mother," said Hitler's aid.

Britain's "Dancing Divinity"



This, ladies and gentlemen, is Miss Jessie Matthews, who bears the proud distinction of being England's foremost exponent of those sprightly activities and superlative endowments that go to make musical comedy stars on both stage and screen. She is, in fact, Great Britain's "girl with the million dollar legs," whose capabilities already have been revealed to Washington audiences on the screen in "Evergreen" and "Frist a Girl" and will be again, beginning Friday at the Earle, in "It's Love Again. In this pose, Miss Matthews seems to be a bit on the side of the Ceylonese—or perhaps it should be spelled "See-lonese!"

Culbertson on Bridge

When you show an expert a hand in which a squeeze is effected, the chances are he will ask: "What of it?" Of course, the squeeze is one of the most spetcacular plays at the bridge table, but the expert has seen hundreds of them. They are just routine to him.

But mention the word "timing" to him and he is all attention. For he knows there is nothing routine about tackling each of the suits at the proper moment, about conserving the right entries and knocking out the opponent's steppers, about planning the play to utilize every possible resource.

And it is for this reason that I take special pleasure in presenting a hand played by my friend, Dr. I. H. Shelly of Norristown, Pa., for not only was his timing excellent, but also he managed to develop a squeeze toward the end o fthe play.

South, dealer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 spade	2 clubs
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the four of clubs and East won with the king. East immediately returned a trump to prevent dummy from ruffing clubs. Dummy won with the kin got hearts and the king of diamonds was led. East won with the ace and returned another trump. The ace of spades was laid down and a small spade returned. East winning wit hthe queen. Since he had no more trumps, he returned a diamond. South won with the jack and ruffed the ten of clubs in dummy. A low spade was ruffed and declarer drew the last trump with the queen. At this point the situation was as follows:

Now Dr. Shelly led the last trump. He did not know whether or not the diamonds would break, but even if they did not he was not greatly concerned, since each player could hold only two cards. West would have to hold a spade to prevent dummy's jack of spades from becoming established, and East would have to hold the ace of clubs to guard South's queen. If either opponent, therefore, had two diamonds, he would be squeezed.

As you will notice from the diagram, Dr. Shelly's careful handling of entries was well rewarded, for the diamond failed to break and the squeeze actually was necessary to the success of the contract.

Draw Voted To Furr and Dublinsky

By Bill McCormick.

Bik league base-stealing featured the game at Griffith Stadium last night as the official deciders, appointed by the boxing commission declared a 12-round brawl between District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr and Harry Dublinsky a draw—of all things?

Before some 3,500 agog customers, who had watched Philip put lumps on the head of Dublinsky almost at will, it was announced that Judge O. Singer had ballotted for Furr; Judge Frank Schuyler had declared Harry the winner, and Referee Denny Hughes had maintained the contest was a stalemate.

On The Post score sheet, Furr was ahead, 48 points to 42½, at the finish, which was enough to win any fight—if they paid off on The Post score sheet, which they didn't.

Big League Stuff.

The majority of those present felt that the stealing had been not only big league, but base—an opinion with which this writer agrees.

Furr had Dublinsky softened up for the finishing punch more than once. He belted Harry all about the ring almost at will and even at times outboxed the highly regarded New Yorker who was slowed up with the first few heavy hits that Phillip landed. All of which went to no avail as the officials apparently leaned over backward to favor the better boxer.

Against perhaps the best opponent he has faced locally, Furr fought undoubtedly the best fight he has recorded here. Unlike the timorous, backing-away fistcuffician who faced Cary Wright at Turner's Arena a few weeks ago, he waded confidently into his more clever opponent, often taking two punches to give one, with each of those exchanges winding up in his favor by virtue of his superior punching power.

Dublinsky proved more or less a sucker for Phil's long, looping right to the head after that punch had been landed often enough to slow him down. In the latter rounds Harry was being belted by blows that should not have landed within 3 feet of him and apparently was unable to duck quickly enough to avert them.

Good in Close.

Harry's only advantage lay at close quarters, where he was able to hold and hit with remarkable speed, completely nullifying Phillip's vaunted right to the midsection by adroit maneuvering.

Ten per cent of the gross gate receipts, which amounted to a bit more than $2,800 were donated to a fund to aid broken-down boxers. The boxing commission took its 5 per cent after that amount had been deducted and Clark Griffith, in whose ball park the embroglio was staged, took his percentage for rent after both the fund and commission had been satisfied.

British Defeat Americans In Open

Chapman Bows, Little Hope for U. S. Player to Retain Crown.

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 25.—America's chances of providing a successor to California's Lawson Little as British amateur golf champion were jolted today when the best fancied invader from the United States, Dick Chapman, and two other Americans, T. Dennis Boardman and Jack Larocque, failed to survive the first day of championship competition.

Larocque sank without firing a shot, the Rye, N. Y., golfer scratching while his opponent, E. B. Tipping waited on the first tee. Boardman, from South Hamilton, Mass., passed out of the picture in his initial match, losing 3 and 1 to the veteran Cyril Tolley. Chapman, who hails from Greenwich, Conn., after a first-round victory over Kenenth W. Greig, of St. Andrews, also fell before the husky Tolley's superb golf in the afternoon. The score was 2 and 1. The day's developments left three Americans in the field. They are Ellis Knowles and Theodore Bassett, of Rye, N. Y., and John Arthur Brown, of Philadelphia. They received first round byes and will see action for the first time tomorrow. Knowles will be matched against Eric Prain. Bassett against Ian Sutherland, and Brown against the former British Walker Cupster, Leonard Crawley.

Robert Sweeny, the transplanted New Yorker living in London, was another player who luckily did not have to brave the drenching mist in the "stagger system" of play going to the bulky field. Sweeny's opponent will be John M. Baillieu.

Chapman shot even fours for the first nine against Tolley and yet lost three holes to the former champion. The American was two down at the turn. He might easily have been five down at the halfway mark had it not been for spectacular recoveries from sand traps on the third, fourth and eighth holes and then negotiating fairly long putts on his first attempt on each of the holes for halves.

Continuing his withering pace, Tolley increased his lead to four up through the thirteenth hole and then for the first time in the match the Briton faltered, hooking his drives into the rough, and lost the fourteenth and fifteenth holes.

The match ended on the seventeenth, where Tolley generously conceded the American a 20-foot putt for half in fours.

Playing slowly and cautionsly, Chapman defeated Greig 1 up in a first round match which required more than three hours.

Toronto Daily Double Pays Record $3,025

Toronto, May 25 (U.P.).—A record daily double payoff for the season was established today when Nooisette came home in the first race and Denclaire won the second to pay $2 ticket holders $3,025.

There were three ticket holders with the Noisette-Denclaire combination.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, May 25.—Don't laugh, but this department, at the risk of putting the Povich curse on the well-meaning attempts of Bucky Harris, is insisting that the Nats will finish in the first division when the American League's vital statistics are finally tabulated.

POVICH.

These eyes ahve just watched the Nats absorb a thorough 6-0 beating from the Boston Red Sox, so it is not in an hour of triumph that I am striking thsi optimistic note. That game I am tossing out of the reckoning, although undoubtedly it will be counted in the league standings.

If there is one pitcher who holds a distinct mastery over the Nats it is Fred Ostermueller, the fellow who held 'em to four hits today and dealt 'em their first regulation-length shut-out of the season. A beating by Ostermueller is no true index to the Nats' batting power. The fellow is apart from the rest, as far as the Nats are concerned.

He is the man who struck out six of 'em i nfour and two-thirds inings a couple of weeks ago and assuredly he has the Indian sign on the Washington club.. Other. left-handers they can beat and have beaten—Lefty Grove, Lefty Gomez, Thornton Lee, Joe Sullivan and Rube Walberg, but Ostermueller—no.

His forte is a fast, wide, sweeping curve that breaks away from Washington's left-handed hitters, rendering such southpaw sluggers as Johnny Stone, Joe Kuhel, Cecila Travis and Buddy Myer, in whom the warp and woof of the Nats' attack is concentrated, well-nigh helpless. This department is conceding Ostermueller's wizardy over the Nats.

Washington, returning home, after a two-week swing through five cities in the league, is a far more impressive ball club than the team that left the Capital on May 11, despite its record of only six victories in the 11 games on the road.

Manager Bucky Harris apparently has found his most effective infield combination with the return of Buddy Myer to regular duty at second base and the transposition of Red Kress to shortstop, which resulted in the shunting of Cecil Travis to the outfield against right-handed pitching.

Myer, whose batting slump and fielding lapses constituted a milestone about the collective necks of the Nats during the first three weeks of the season, is now performing with the same dash and effect that stamped him the club's most valuable player last year. But it is the perennially sensational Red Kress who has proved the spark plug of the tram.

Ever since he was assigned the shortstop job in Cleveland, the redhead has been no les sthan a marvel in the field; his hitting is taken for granted. In every game Kress has collared ground balls and rifled 'em over to the first base like some composite of Hans Wagner and Roger Peckinpaugh. As the middle man in double plays, Kress has added the best arm in the league's infields to the Nats' defense.

It is no great task, either, to cite the play of Buddy Lewis at third base. The 19-year-old kid was hailed as the league's new sensation in every city in which he performed, and with reason. Not only has he continued to smack the daylights out of the ball and lead all the Nats at bat, but he has been fielding his position like a veteran. He has been both steady and brilliant and steadily brilliant.

In consigning the Nats to a first-division berth, this department foresees the intrustion of the club into the select circle that the critics have been reserving for the Yankees, Red Rox, Tigers and Indians. On paper, the Nats do not figure ahead of New York, Boston or Detroit, but in this department's opinion, they can, conceivably, beat out Cleveland.

It strikes me that for several seasons now Cleveland has been the most overrated club in the American League, with its much-vaunted pitching staff always failing to live up to its press notices and deliver. When Manager Steve O'Neill traded off Monte Pearson for Johnny Allen, he apparently was badly stung on the deal, and the Indians, like the Nats, are now pinched for pitchers. In that case I am constrained to prefer the Nats in any comparison.

Bees Score Over Dodgers, Win, 8-0

Brooklyn, May 25 (AP).—Johnny Lanning, rookie Boston pitcher, shut the Brooklyn Dodgers out, 8-0, here this afternoon, and hit a home run in the seventh when the Bees secured the ball game by getting four runs on six straight hits.

The Bees knocked Fred Frankhouse from the mound and continued to hit Tom Baker and Dutch Leonard about as they pleased.

Giants Halt Phils On Leslie's Homer

New York, May 25 (AP).—Sam Leslie's home run in the fourth inning with two out gave the New York Giants a 1-to-0 victory over the Phillies here today and a 3-to-1 decision in the series.

Leslie, who made five hits in five trips to the plate yesterday, broke up one of the finest pitching battles of the season at the Polo Ground. Joe Bowman, Phils' pitcher, gave only four hits, while Lefty Al Smith was hit safely five times.

Nats Limited To 4 Hits in 6-0 Defeat

DeShong Is Victim at Start; Appleton Good in Relief Role.

By Shirley Povich.

Fenway Park, Boston, May 25.—Washington's four-game winning streak met a violent end this afternoon. Reduced to a weakened state by the four-hit pitching of a man giving the name of Fred Ostermueller, the Nats were clubbed into defeat by blunt instruments in the hands of several persons identified as members of the Boston Red Sox.

Authorities here easily established a motive. The Red Sox were known to be nursing a grudge for two straight pastings dealt 'em over the week-end by the Washington Club. In fact, the Red Sox willingly confessed with some pride that they were the perpetrators of the 6-0 assault.

Mercilessly the left-handed Ostermueller strangled the Nats' batting attack. He cut down six of 'em with a whiplash strikeout ball and he closed third base to all Nats except one. Red Kress alone offered much resistance. He accounted for exactly half of the Nats' hits with a pair of singles to leftfield. Jess Hill singled in the first inning and Buddy Lewis doubled in the eighth, but otherwise the Nats were thoroughly tamed.

The Red Sox fell upon Jimmy DeShong, the Nats' leading pitcher, with great violence at the outset of the proceedings. They clubbed him for four hits and four runs in that first inning, wrung another run out of him in the second, and Manager Bucky Harris humanely rescued him from the game in the third.

Pete Appleton put up a furious battle for the Nats from the second inning to the finish, permitting the Red Sox only three hits and one run, but the horse—or game—or whatever it was, had already been stolen and the fragrance of Appleton's pitching was wasted in the salty air of the Hub.

With two out, the Sox resumed the punishment of DeShong. Jimmy Foxx drew a walk, Rick Ferrell slammed a double high against the leftfield wall, Bill Werber was intentionally passed and Oscar Melillo drove a single through Joe Kuhel's mitt that scored the third and fourth runs of the inning.

They came out swinging against DeShong in the second inning and picked up another run when Cramer singled through the box, Manush singled to right and Foxx rammed a long fly into centerfield. Thus it was 5-0 when Appleton appeared on the scene in the third.

Playing no favorites, the Sox got

Rick Ferrell Hurt; Nats' Jinx Persists

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, May 25.—Washington's American League wrecking crew tonight numbered another important figure among its impressive list of victims on enemy clubs

Rick Ferrell, ace catcher of the Red Sox, is the latest star to meet up with injury against the Nats. Attempting to beat out a two-base hit in the first inning today, Ferrell sprained his ankle running into second base and is expected to be absent from the line-up for a week.

Thus the Nats do not trifle with the lesser lights of the league. Two days before Lefty Grove suffered a dislocated finger on his pitching hand while fielding the ball against Washington. Last month Hank Greenberg and Mickey Cochrane, of the Tigers were removed from the Detroit line-up on consecutive days by injuries inflicted by Jake Powell.

A's Rookie, 19, Turns Back Yanks, 10-7

Ross Not Disturbed by 5-Run Attack; Gomez Is Pounded Out.

Philadelphia, May 25.—The Philadelphia Athletics overcame a five-run handicap and defeated the New York Yankees, 10-7, today.

With Lee Ross, a 19-year-old rookie from the North Carolina Textile League, pitching against them, the Yanks scored five in the first, when they filled the bases and Bill Dickey cleared them with a triple. George Selkirk followed with a home run.

But Ross stayed in the ball game and gave up only two more runs in the next eight innings, while the A's scored three in their half of the first, knocked Lefty Gomez from the hill and went on to tie the score in the third on a pair of walks and singles by Johnson and Newsome.

Mackmen Take Lead.

The A's took the lead in the fourth when they scored two runs on Finney's single, a sacrifice, Wally Moses' double and Puccinelli's single.

Moses hit a home run in the sixth to add to the A's advantage, and they scored two more in the eighth when Finney bunted safely, Moses sacrificed, Puccinelli walked, filling the bases. Higgins then hit to Rolfe, whose throw to the plate forced Finney at home, but Warstler scored when Bill Dickey threw wild past Gehrig in an attempt to make

Colt Pulls Up Lame After Workout

Serious Injury to His Right Foreleg Reported by Max Hirsch.

Derby and Preakness Winner Is Out of Belmont Stakes.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, May 25.—Bold Venture, the horse of the year on the American turf, bowed a tendon in a workout today at Belmont Park and, on the statement of his trainer, Max Hirsch, will not race again during 1936.

Unbeaten this year and leading contender for the 3-year-old championship, following spectacularly close victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, Bold Venture's sudden accident came as a terrific shock to horsemen in general and Morton L. Schwartz, the colt's owner, in particular.

Bold Venture turned up lame after finishing a 6-furlong workout in 1:15. Examination revealed a bowed tendon in the right foreleg. The injury, even if it responds satisfactorily to treatment, means the colt will be out of training indefinitely, Hirsch said. It may cause permanent retirement for the horse which had captured the fancy of turf followers throughout the country.

The injury deprives Bold Venture of a chance to win the classic Belmont Stakes, to be run June 6, and renew rivalry with Brevity and Granville, the two colts which have fought it out with the Schwartz flyer this spring on separate occasions. Brevity was beaten a head by Bold Venture in the Derby. Granville lost a nose decision in the Preakness two weeks later. In each of these races, Bold Venture turned in the third fastest time on record.

The race for 3-year-old honors is now wide open. It may not be settled to anybody's satisfaction, with Bold Venture on the shelf. Granville and Brevity look best, but there are several other contenders, including C. V. Whitney's Red Rain, a sensation as a juvenile, but so far an uncertain performer this year.

Bold Venture, despite a tendency to unsoundness, had responded brilliantly to Hirsch's careful conditioning this year. Wintered at Columbia, S. C., the Schwartz colt was brought to a peak for the Derby

U.S.-Owned Horse Held At 21 to 2

By the Associated Press.

London, May 25.—A rush of betting support today hammered down the odds on William Woodward's Boswell and left the American-owned colt a strong fourth choice for the derby to be run at Epsom Downs Wednesday.

Furnishing the most notable development of the Victoria Club's betting call-over, £15,000 (about $75,000), was wagered on Boswell to win, cutting his price to 21 to 2. This large sum, practically all of which was placed with professional bookmakers, caused interest to soar in the brown son of Bosworth-Flyong Gal II which only a fortnight ago was a long shot at 25 to 1.

The Aga Khan's Taj Akbar remained the first choice at 13 to 2 followed by Lord Astor's Pay Up, winner of the 2,000 guineas, 100 to 15, and Sir Alfred Butt's Noble King, 15 to 2.

Workouts May Be Cause.

Various explanations were given for the sudden spurt in Boswell's stock. One said that Boswell had been giving his famous stablemate, Omaha, fits in recent severe trials over the full derby distance of 1 mile, 885 yards. Another had it that Boswell has been working out so well that Woodward's other Derby entrant, Flares, winner of Newmarket Stakes, probably will be withdrawn from Wednesday's classic.

No American-owned thoroughbred has won the Derby since boss Richard Croker brought over Orey in 1907 to win at 100 to 9 odds.

A further indication of Boswell's rise in favor was noted in the annual Derby Eve luncheon attended by most of the owners, the leading jockeys and other notables. Three prominent turfmen—Lords Londonderry, Stanhope and Zetland—named the American horse as their choice.

Predicts Boswell Victory.

"I'll give you the greatest prophecy of modern times," said Lord Londonderry. "Boswell's certain to win."

Woodward did not attend the luncheon but announced earlier in the day that Omaha, which is campaigning in this country, would be scratched from the Coronation Stakes at Epsom Thursday.

Taj Akbar remained the favorite despite Lord Carnarvon's quip at today's luncheon that "15 years hence folks will say: 'Oh yes, that was the Derby the Aga Khan didn't win.'"

Dublinsky Battles To Draw With Furr

once a leading welterweight in the District. Duffy, who won on a technical knockout in a previous engagement, proved his first performance was no accident by completely outclassing Bobby in every round.

Young Raspi, rough-and-tough Baltimore lightweight, won a unanimous decision from Ray Nash, a Pete Reilly protege, in the preliminary which preceded the main event. Nash displayed a highly educated left hand, which was not quite enough to carry him to victory over the free-wheeling Baltimore belter.

Bobby Dechter, a substitute for Fritzi McBride, won a unanimous decision from Johnny Dean, the Charlotte, N. C., lightweight, in another six-rounder. The winner's straight punching proved too much for the wild-swingin tactics of the crowd-pleasing loser.

Charley Loughran, brother of the former light heavyweight champion, won a much-disputed decision from Ben Brown, of Atlanta, in a fast and furious six-round opener Outweighed almost 10 pounds by Loughran, who weighed 167½ to his 158½. Brown battled valiantly every inch of the way, only to drop the official award in the opinion of the official deciders.

Thirty-two to Qualify for Top Flight at Kenwood Club

Golf Tourney Draws Ace Players

50 Already Are Paired; Peacock-Yoder Shoot Together.

By Dave Herman.

Kenwood Golf and Country Club's first invitation tournament, which opens tomorrow, will have a championship flight of 32 qualifiers.

The committee, in listing pairings and starting times for the tournament, made this announcement last night confident that the doubling of the title division would strike a popular chord with the 50 some contestants who thus far have entered.

Sixteen in Other Flights.

With tomorrow devoted to the qualifying round, first and second round matches will be played Thursday, the quarter-finals and semifinals Friday, and the finals Saturday. This applies only to the main flight. Sixteen will make up the second flight. As many flights as the field warrants will be arranged.

Hill Is Caught in Landslide as Nats Lose at Boston

Jessie Hill, Washington outfielder, kicked up so much dust as he slid into third base yesterday that he was completely hidden. But the umpire saw enough to say that Bill Werber had tagged him out. The prominent figure at left is Coach Earl McNeely.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

It would be difficult to recall an evening comparable to the most enjoyable one Friday. When it comes to providing seafood for more than 200 guests this writer will pick Danny Hanlon, legal department, Internal Revenue, every time. Dan brought down from Boston 200 hand-picked lobsters, so tender and toothsome that it was no trick to eat one—the second just about caused a panic—supposin' they ask for the third one—they're all gone. Two big luscious lobsters sunk the ship and saved the day. Were they good? Woe is us for another at this moment. Never have we tasted such royal lobster.

For those that did not relish the "reds," baked shad, tartar sauce and garnishings were served. Even after all the lobster many of us sampled the shad. It was delicious. Coffee, cold draught beer, potato salad and rye bread rounded out the bill of fare. Music furnished by four dark brown boys ranging from 10 to 16 added to the atmosphere along the Potomac River; the trap drummer had a first class but badly worn washboard to snare upon (a genius at his trade), a banjo, mandolin and last, but not least, a cornet made from a funnel and manipulated by hand and thick lips—well done. Clog dancing by a member of the troupe kept the guests in an uproar.

Commissioner Frank T. Bell and Deputy Commissioner Charlie Jackson, of the Bureau of Fisheries, were our hosts and what hosts these chaps are: Frank and Charlie waited until everyone had been well taken care of before they sat down. Due to the small dining room, near the shore, it was necessary to feed the guests as they arrived and over a period from five to eight o'clock. It worked out great as many were delayed and nobody was left unserved or left standing, awaiting their turn.

Twenty of our fishing and hunting Senators, approximately the same number of Congressmen, bankers, lawyers, doctors, chiefs of several bureaus and men in the upperstrata of the business world rubbed elbows while telling stories of their experiences with rod or gun.

The writer took advantage of the opportunity to tell a few Congressional leaders of his experiences with illegal netters and what could be done to stop such practices in the future—anglers, we really arrived at the door of success because we found several Senators who had been-fishing in Oregon Inlet that had a taste of a gill net dropped near their boat—and were the Senators burned up about it. Guess our blue fishing this year will have a chance—in spite of netters and a few very lax State officials whose capacity is pointing a finger at the guilty and saying, "Don't do it again, John," and with a wink let him go.

Brewers Rally to Tie Miller Nine 7-7

The Heurich Brewers pulled a five-run ninth-inning rally yesterday best described as super-sensational, extra-spectacular and downright stupendous to keep their unbeaten record intact and give them a 7-7 tie with Miller Furniture in a crucial Industrial League game of the Washington Post Sandlot Association. Some 2,500 fans watched the game on the South Ellipse.

Setting a new high for thrills this season, the Brewers went into the last half of the ninth inning trailing, 7-2 and then crowded over five runs, missing an 8-7 victory by an eye-lash at the plate. The Brewers had won all four starts in the Industrial League and both their games in the National City League.

around to Appleton in the fourth, when Eric McNair slammed a double to leftfield and scored when Manush banged a double to right. That made it 6-0, and for all that happened after that the two teams might just as well have quit then and there.

Washington had half a chance to get back into the ball game in the eighth, when a walk to Hill and Lewis' double put two men on base with one out, but Buddy Myer met that emergency by standing very statuesquely while Ostermueller bent a third strike across his middle.

Western Faces Tech For Baseball Crown

By John R. Vosburgh.

Catapulting in the general direction of its first interhigh championship in 13 years, Western High's unbeaten ball club collides with the last obstruction between it and the 1936 championship today at 3:30 p. m. when it meets Tech in Western Stadium.

The Georgetowners are heavily favored to rake the Maroon into their heap of victims, which now numbers Eastern, Central and Roosevelt. Coach Cliff Moore has the best pitching staff in the series all set to throw into action, with lean Leaton Kushman as his probable choice.

Long, lanky and left-handed Leaton, who was virtually unknown even to most of his teammates when the season started, has risen from remote obscurity to certain All-High honors by pitching Western to three series victories in a row. Although the veterans, Ted Kinsman and Bob Raftery, are aching for a series assignment, Coach Moore is preferring to give Kushman his chance of rolling up a perfect interhigh record.

Coach Ed Foxley of Tech is expecting to pin his hopes on wiry Wes Snow, who holds a four-hit conquest of Eastern's champions to his credit. A victory for Tech will be more or less malicious satisfaction since the Manual Trainers are already out of the running for the title.

Central High, incidentally, is eyeing today's transactions on Thirty-seventh street with considerable interest. A Western victory will clinch the championship for the Georgetowners. A defeat for Western will enable Central to tie for the title by beating Roosevelt.

Western has not won the championship outright since 1923. In 1932 Central, Eastern and Western finished in a tie for the title.

The Georgetowners will come out with the same cast which has swept through all three series games with comparative ease. This includes the smoothest infield in the series, composed of Henry Doyle on first, Bill Edmonston on second, Dickie Lynham on third and Jackie Lawyer at short.

One more interhigh game remains after today, namely the Central-Roosevelt affray, scheduled for Thursday at Central. Today's result will make that contest either an anti-climax or super-climax.

Plans for City Net Tourney Cancelled

The annual City of Washington tennis tournament, for seven years one of the sport's established events of the Capital area, is virtually doomed for this season, according to local officials who met last night to consider the situation. At the same time, it was announced that the National Capital Parks Tennis Association will sponsor a new open spring tournament to begin Saturday.

The city event more or less died from sheer inattention. Originally scheduled for May 23, it was put over until Saturday with the hope that by that time sufficient country club courts could be secured on which to hold the matches.

However, it was decided yesterday that enough courts are not available. A meeting was held by officers of the National Capital Parks Tennis Association headed by President Muscoe Garnett and including Jim Heiskell, vice president, and Felix Silva, secretary, who volunteered to conduct an open spring tournament.

Club members as well as public parks players will be eligible. Entries will be received at the Tennis Shop until Friday at 6 p. m., play starting Saturday afternoon. The entry fee is $2.

Dunbar Scores Over Armstrong Nine, 7 to 6

Dunbar High eked out a 7-6 victory over Armstrong High yesterday at Armstrong in a colored interhigh series game. Davies held Armstrong to five hits and staved off a last-inning rally, which saw Second Baseman Reeder of the losers clout a home run over the right-field fence.

U.S. Telephones Half World's 33,539,890

Germany Is Next Largest User, With Total of 3,134,103.

New York, May 25.—Use of the telephone throughout the world has increased more than 2,100 per cent since 1900, whereas the population of all the countries of the globe has increased only about 33 per cent, statistics of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. show. A total of 33,539,890 telephones is reported in the world on January 1 of last year, the latest date for which comparable statistics are available.

Thirty-five years ago telephone communication was restricted to comparatively short distances. Today it is possible to talk around the world. Telephone users in the United States may now be connected with almost any one of 17,000,000 telephones in this country and with any of the approximately 15,000,000 telephones in foreign lands. The American telephone user now has access to 93 per cent of the world's instruments.

According to the survey 16,868,955 telephones, which is more than one-half of the world's total, were located in the United States. Europe operated 12,028,756 telephones or approximately 36 per cent of the world total. Canada operated 1,193,729 telephones and Japan 1,068,244 instruments, each having about 3 per cent of the world's total. The remaining 7 per cent of the world's telephones were distributed over Asia, Africa, Oceania and South and Central America.

Of the total world telephones, 61 per cent are operated by privately owned systems, the report shows. In the United States all telephones are operated by private companies and this country not only has more telephones than all the rest of the world, but also excels in the number of telephones relative to population. The United States with 13.36 telephones for each 100 of its people, has more than six times the corresponding telephone development of Europe. The second ranking country in telephone density is Canada, with 11.00 telephones per 100 population, where 84 per cent of the telephones are under private operation. Next comes Denmark with a development of 10.31 and with 96 per cent of its telephones privately owned.

The largest number of telephones to be found in any country outside of the United States is 3,134,104 in Germany, all of which are owned and operated by the German government. However, the German system provides only 4.69 telephones per 100 population, or slightly more than one-third of the development in the United States. Great Britain and France, also with government systems, have 4.06 and 3.30 telephones per 100 people, respectively.

Ford Profits Less Last Year Than in 1934

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 25.—Based on the balance sheet of December 31, 1935, Ford Motor Co. had an indicated 1935 profit of $3 565,617, it was disclosed today.

This profit was equivalent to $1.03 a share on the 3,452,900 shares of $5 par value. Indicated profit as calculated compares with an indicated profit of $6,860,462 in 1934, equivalent to $1.98 a share; indicated loss of $3,480,331 in 1933, and indicated loss of $79,247,669 in 1932.

The balance sheet showed a profit and loss account of $582,977,651 as of December 31, 1935, compared with $580,276,391 at the close of 1934.

Reserves increased during the year from $10,096,989 to $10,961,346. The figures do not take into account any dividends that may have been paid to the holdings of the business, Henry Ford, Mrs. Henry Ford and Edsel B. Ford.

Prior to 1934 the stock was $100 par, the capital having been readjusted by issuance of 20 $5 par shares for each $100 per share.

The balance sheet, filed once a year with the Massachusetts commissioner of corporations, is the only statement published which gives any clue to the earnings of the Ford company, which is privately owned.

United Shoe Machinery.

New York, May 25 (AP).—United Shoe Machinery Corporation, with principal plants in Massachusetts and abroad, reported net income of $10,267,642 or $4.28 a share for the year ended February 29 against $8,825,514, or $3.65 a share in the preceding fiscal year.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Hold Steady in Dull Trading; Bonds Are Firm; Wheat Advances.

New York, May 25.—Stock turnover again was approximately 650,000 shares, which seems to be the total of speculative interest, investment shifting and operating odds and ends of this phase of the stock market. The market was without rally or decline of consequence, and at the close prices were irregularly higher. Bonds worked higher. September wheat closed half a cent higher at 85⅛ cents a bushel.

Although no decision of importance was expected from the Supreme Court today, the stock market in the early hours was not much more active than it has been on the traditionally expectant Monday mornings. Prices were fractionally higher at the start and the improvement was steadily held throughout. Finding nothing in the news to stimulate activity and the inside conditions being unchanged, traders bought and sold in a languid manner. In spite of the current dullness, the feeling prevails in Wall Street that the next important movement in stocks will be upward.

Business in process and in prospect supports that view, but the election uncertainties and the fact that Congress is in session are highly uncertain factors. A reasonable addition to corporation taxes might not stop recovery. Failure to increase taxes would make the currency position more unstable, but even that for some time longer might not bring on a business setback. Just now the principal threat to the dollar is the increasing weakness in some of the European currencies. Those who wish to borrow trouble find in that situation a danger of another world-wide currency upset.

Steel Rate Lowered.

Germany's financial position is by no means good, and now that much of the heavy work on war preparations is accomplished, unemployment is likely to rise and industrial output (along with tax collections) to recede. For a long time the mark has been under rather shaky control, and formal devaluation as a means of lifting Germany out of some of her financial troubles is likely to take place at any time. Italy is in a similar position, and the uncertainties with respect to the French franc are well known.

Francs were steady against dollars, but weak in terms of sterling, indicating a flight of funds from Paris still in progress. Presumably it has been the custom of the British control to slacken its support of francs over the week-end, and resume on Mondays. Another large loss of gold probably will be reported this week by the Bank of France. Reported views of British authorities suggest that currency stabilization among the United States and the principal European countries still is some distance away.

Treasury Savings Bonds.

The Treasury is doing well with its baby bonds. The postoffices are selling monthly from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 of these United States savings bonds. Most of them appear to stick with purchasers, for in the first three weeks of this month sales were $26,165,933 and redemptions were only $1,115,461. For the fiscal year sales have totaled $236,653,485 and redemptions before maturity have been $9,021,970. Monthly sales of the bonds are not running at a rate as high as they were a year ago, but the bonds then were new and there was more of a campaign to push them. In these days when 2 per cent is about all the funds one can obtain in savings banks or in short term securities, the 3 per cent which the buyer of savings bonds may receive if he holds the obligations to maturity evidently has some attractions.

Wall Street Sweepings.

With only five more trading days to go, activity in Great Northern rights increased. On expiration of the rights to the preferred shareholders to subscribe for new bonds, the residue of unexercised rights will go to the General Mortgage bondholders. Bonds were exceptionally active also, most of the trading taking place in the convertible 4s of 1946 . . . This was the last meeting day of the Supreme Court for this month, which brought to mind the famous last Monday of May, 1935, when the court unceremoniously tossed a dead jay bird out of the window, to rest on Hugh Johnson's pile of dead cats. From that formal death date of NRA until a month ago there was scarcely any interruption to an advance in stock prices, reflecting the impetus given business by the check to the New Deal's unsound economic control attempt . . . Louisiana Oil preferred has taken the place of Amerada as the oil stock sensation. The sharp gains have discouraged sellers for all accounts and bids have the inevitable effect in a thin market. The price jumped 10 points early today to set a new high record.

"They" Hold It Down.

A reader who has become a long-term investor because his chain-store stock has declined is baffled by a market problem: "There are only 233,000 shares listed. In ten weeks' time, approximately 32,000 shares have been bought, but always at slowly receding prices. The company is sound financially and they are doing a fine business. Since the stock is sold much higher, it stands to reason that a majority of holders would still hold it. One-seventh of the entire outstanding stock has been bought these past ten weeks. I would say that three-sevenths had been bought at slightly higher levels. It also stands to reason that some of the stock is closely held for voting privileges. At the present rate, trading will exceed the number of shares outstanding, yet the stock keeps on at this price. How is it done? Do people just naturally give away their holdings? Of course, I know that the value of this stock will be greatly enhanced some day, but I would like it explained how it is 'they' keep a good stock down."

Churning.

This reader's first error in logic is assuming that each sale represents a different block of stock. A turnover of one-seventh in ten weeks is not surprising. Normally the trading volume represents a small percentage of the total outstanding certificates passing from hand to hand. The small trader buys a couple of hundred shares, waits a week or two for a rise that does not appear, sells it to another who becomes discouraged as the price drifts lower, passes it along; result 600 shares sales volume, only 200 shares involved. Whether "they" are keeping a good stock down or whether "they" simply have less faith in the company's earning power than the reader is another problem. A statistical service rates the stock speculative in view of rising accumulations on the preferred and declining profit margins.

Bankers Find Outlook Bright For Railroads

Substantial Improvement Reported by I. B. A. Committee.

Chicago, May 25.—Distinctly brighter earnings prospects for the railroads are held out in an interim report issued today by the railroad securities committee of the Investment Bankers Association of America. A substantial improvement in credit for many of the important systems reflects the improvement in their situation, the report adds.

Gains in traffic volume which started last August, have been maintained to date and present carloadings furnish a basis for belief that some hesitation since January 1 may be merely a normal pause in the general upward trend, it continued. The records since the first of the year were distorted due to blizzards and floods, but have recently indicated further improvement.

The common belief that railroad traffic is permanently on a lower basis than prior to the depression may be challenged if a recovery in the construction industry brings the business to railroads that some students of the situation anticipate, according to the committee, which included Fairman R. Dick, Dick & Merle-Smith, New York, chairman; Earle Baillie, J. & W. Seligman & Co., New York; George Bovenizer, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., New York; Lee L. Daly, Daly & Craib, St. Louis; Pierpont V. Curb Is Irregular In Dull Trading

New York, May 25 (AP).—Narrow gains and losses were about evenly divided in the curb market today. The irregular finish followed mild forenoon improvement, particularly among industrial specialties. Trading was dull, transfers approximating 170,000 shares, the same as last Friday.

Lake Shore Mines proved a heavy spot among nonferrous issues, dipping 2¼ points on light offerings. Fractional losers included Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, Gulf Oil and Sunshine Mining.

Issues maintaining a steady to slightly higher price range included Electric Bond & Share, Glen Alden Coal, Humble Oil, Pan American Airways, Technicolor, Pioneer Gold and Commonwealth Edison.

Commodities Peak Passed, Prices Indicate

Tendency to Lower Level in Evidence Since Last December.

New York, May 25. — During the last eight months of 1935, commodity prices showed little tendency to extend the rise which began in March, 1933. The wholesale price index, compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on the basis of 1926 as 100, after declining from 96 in June, 1929 to 59.8 in February, 1933, was 80.1 in April, 1935. The rise during the remainder of last year was only sufficient to carry the index to 80.9 in December. Since the beginning of 1936, prices have shown a tendency to weaken. The price index for the week ended May 9 was 78.6.

The action of commodity prices during the past year suggests that the upward movement has run its course and that the next major development will be a recession, says the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Such a development could be in conformity with the course followed by prices after the Napoleonic Wars and again after the Civil War. So far, since the end of the World War, the price trend has been similar to the trends after the two previous major conflicts. It is thus logical to expect that prices in the future will continue to conform to the patterns previously traced.

The general trend of prices after the Napoleonic Wars was downward for approximately 29 years while, after the Civil War, there was a long-term decline which lasted about 33 years. These former movements indicate that prices at the present time have not completed their long-term downward trend since only 16 years have elapsed since the price peak in 1920.

Rallies of the past may be taken as a guide to the extent and duration of the rally which began in March, 1933. The rally which started in 1834 lasted 34 months while 1879 ushered in a rally lasting 36 months. This testimony from the past therefore suggests that the peak of the price rise which began in March, 1933, was reached in December 1935 since the month represented the thirty-fourth month of the rise and since that peak has not been exceeded during the five months which have elapsed since December. In view of the fact that May represented the forty-first month since the beginning of the rise, the evidence is that a definite price decline has already commenced.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 25.—Trading in today's stock market was on a small scale and an easier tone prevailed in most sections. Transatlantic shares were firm on favorable Wall Street advices and oil shares recovered from their early losses. Other groups moved irregularly.

Paris.—There was a scarcity of buyers among the cautious traders who were awaiting the new chamber to convene, resulting in lower prices for French issues. International shares gained slightly. The closing tone was irregular.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed about one penny lower on reports of larger shipments to the United Kingdom and improved United States and Canadian crop reports. Cotton closed very steady on fears of excessive rains in Texas and drought conditions in the Eastern belt.

Institute Publishes Booklet on Steel

New York, May 25.—Publication of a booklet entitled, "The Men Who Make Steel," in which prominence is given to the development and practice of co-operation between employes and management in the steel industry, has just been announced by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The booklet emphasizes that since labor seeks a wage from industry, management a salary, and capital seeks a return on its investment, the aims of each group are identical.

Illinois Issues Financial Primer

Springfield, Ill., May 25 (AP).—Abandoning involved balance statements and technical terms, the State of Illinois today sought to give "the man on the street" the story of its financial structure in a book of simple language and charts.

Entitled "The A B C of Illinois State Finance—Everybody's Business," the book was written by Finance Director K. L. Ames. He said it was the "first attempt to present a comprehensive account of its financing in terms anyone can understand." In less than a week, he said, the first edition of 10,000 copies was exhausted.

A 43 per cent increase in membership during the first four months of 1936 as compared with the same period last year is reported by George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club. The club has taken over the entire building at 1643 Connecticut avenue to house its expanding activities.

"Continued economic stability and progress in Washington and surrounding territory has been an important factor in Keystone's remarkable growth," said Mr. Keneipp.

On the Air Today

The handwriting is appearing on the wall as the days pass. Last week it was announced that Cecil B. DeMille will take over production of the "Radio Theater," Monday night WJSV, C. B. S. presentation, beginning June 1. This has been followed now by telegraphed word that the first DeMille production will be "Legionnaire and the Lady," starring Marlene Dietrich and Clark Gable.

The radio play will be fashioned from the film "Morrocco." And for the first time in their careers, La Dietrich and Gable will be costarred in a theatrical offering—of any kind.

A year ago Hollywood was a place in California where pictures were made and New York was the core of the radio broadcasting apple. True many pick-ups were made from the film center. But the "big shows" were from Manhattan. More film celebrities made the trek to New York for their radio assignments than radio stars to Hollywood for pictures. And the programs originating from Hollywood were in most cases to accommodate a regularly scheduled radio artist who was temporarily engaged in making a picture.

That picture is changing—and rapidly. C. B. S. for many months has been prepared to handle a large number of programs originating on the West Coast. In the last year, N. B. C. has completed its Hollywood broadcasting plant with large and numerous studios.

And the roll of radio personalities who make their headquarters in Hollywood for several months of the year is on a steady increase. Cantor, Benny, Crosby and Burns and Allen are only a few of the leading artists who broadcast regularly from the Coast. James Melton, Gladys Swarthout, Bob Burns and numerous others are convenienced no end when the programs in which they are featured are originated in the West.

Next winter, no doubt, will find a fair share of the networks' biggest attractions coming from Hollywood—identified as West Coast productions quite as much as "Hollywood Hotel," "Chateau." Crosby's "Music Hall," "Parties at Pickfair" and many others.

No one is quite yet ready to say the radio broadcasting industry is definitely on the move westward but Radio Row is not going to be surprised if the shift is made in a reasonable lenght of time.

Features today:

Northern Dramatic Co.: Invites a studio audience for the first time in its seven years history. Tickets available at WOL studios. Tonight's performance: "Nocturne Russe," directed by Marvin Beers, featuring Yvonne Kushner, WOL, at 10.

Another Boys Club Night: For Radio Joe, WMAL, at 6:30. Request numbers will be played for each person subscribing $1 or more to the club fund.

Bill Robinson: Taps for Ben Bernie's audience, WMAL, at 8. Also Beverly Roberts, song story stylist.

• • • •

Putting quite an opposite angle on the Westward Ho tendency in broadcasting, Eddie Dowling, Ray Dooley, Helen Ward and Benny Goodman's orchestra move eastward this week for their weekly "Revue." Hereafter, the show will originate in New York studios. (It has been originating in Chicago.) Goodman and his band is due here in Washington for a night's engagement early in June, incidentally.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

By Morgan Baker.

While awaiting word from the 10 members of the executive council in the field, this unit of the American Federation of Government Employes is marking time toward taking disciplinary action against E. Claude Babcock, A. F. G. E. president, author of "Bulletin No. 3 of the Republican National Committee," an attack on the Administration's personnel policies.

BAKER.

Meanwhile, indignation flared against Babcock's bulletin in both conservative and liberal, old established civil service and New Deal patronage agencies.

The first formal expression comes from the conservative Panama Canal Office Lodge, which was recently suspended following adoption by the lodge of a resolution calling upon Babcock to resign.

"When Mr. Babcock definitely aligned himself with a major political party," declares Cecil Mears, president of the Panama Canal Office Lodge, "by writing a bulletin for publication by the National Republican Committee, he placed the entire A. F. G. E. organization, of which he is president, in an untenable position.

Effectiveness Destroyed.

"Unless some immediate action is taken by the organization," Mears continues, "to remove Mr. Babcock as an official of the A. F. G. E., its effectiveness in behalf of Government employes will be entirely nil, and there can be no possible incentive for membership in such a federation. Many members of the A. F. G. E. and nonmember Government employes indorse the policies of this Administration and will resent such a venomous attack upon President Roosevelt and his Cabinet members.

"Under the circumstances," Mears concludes, "we of the Panama Canal Lodge hope the executive council will reconsider its action in suspending our lodge and cancel such suspension."

Four other conservative old-line establishments were represented in the quartet of executive council members who issued a statement, disowning the Babcock bulletin as expressing the views of the A. F. G. E. The four federation council members and their departments are:

Cecil E. Custer, national treasurer, Civil Service Commission; and vice presidents, Ira Y. Bain, Internal Revenue; G. Carroll Diamond, War, and Michael D. Schaefer, Navy.

Meetings Being Planned.

While meetings are being planned by lodges in the New Deal agencies, AAA Lodge No. 116 leads this group in taking formal action. The lodge, under President John Dwyer, has adopted a resolution "condemning, censuring and disapproving the action of the national president of the A. F. G. E. as regards the statements made by him in the pamphlet issued and printed by the Republican National Committee."

Copies of the resolution have been forwarded to the White House, Secretary of Agriculture and the chairmen of the Democratic and Republican national committees among others.

Members of the executive council in Washington last night expected the council would meet within two weeks and predicted that Babcock would be relieved of all duties as president of the A. F. G. E.

Charles G. Duganne (F), Federal Trade Commission, has designed a golf course marker whereby the distance of a number of balls may be measured at different distances and in different directions from the hole.

BREUNINGER GIVES YOU THE UNEXPECTED AT A PRICE YOU WANT TO PAY

1310 Locust Rd. NW., Shepherd Park—Complete! That's the word that best describes the sweeping charm and elegance of this home that sparkles with simplicity of which few artists and architects are capable of instilling in average-priced homes. Yet Breuninger did it—Breuninger has already made the name famous not only for a better type of building construction but for offering the finest homes at modest prices. This home has a spacious front porch which leads to large center hall, and there's another porch in the back, off the living room which overlooks the garden. Now let's go into the manly den which is skilfully panelled; then to the lavatory at the rear of the stair hall. There's a cool dining room and a delightful electric kitchen; three master bedrooms; 2 beautiful tiled baths; screened-in sleeping porch, finished attic which is well insulated as are all the exterior walls of this home. Entire home is centered in 60-foot landscaped lot. Yes, there's a garage. Better see it today. Two blocks east of 16th St. on Locust rd. nw.

G. O. P. Women Hear Prediction Of Vote Victory

Montgomery Club Is Told by Reece of 'Failure of New Deal.'

Former Representative Carroll Reece, of Tennessee, predicted a "repercussion of sentiment" against the New Deal and an overwhelming Republican victory next November in a speech last night before the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County, meeting in the courthouse at Rockville.

Reece told how the Democrats were building a powerful campaign organization with relief expenditures. He read a circular distributed among WPA workers in Pennsylvania, instructing them to register as Democats on danger of losing their jobs. He read another letter urging WPA workers to contribute to the Democratic war chest.

But there will be a revulsion against such tactics, he predicted, and the result will be a Republican victory. Meantime, he said, Republicans should get out and work for that victory in the interest of patriotism.

Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr, author with the Republican national headquarters, said that, in view of the way the Democrats repudiated their 1932 platform, they were going to have a difficult time framing one this year. The word of the Roosevelt Administration, she said, is "not worth a plugged buffalo nickel."

Others who spoke were Police Chief J. William Garrett, Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Montgomery County; Byron Sedgewick, president of the Suburban Young Republicans of the county, and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, president of the Federation of Republican Women of the county.

Wiley Ford Bridge Work Progresses

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 25.—Rapid progress is being made on restoring the bridge over the Potomac River at Wiley Ford, opposite South Cumberland. Piling had been driven in the river bed to support the false work while the steel trusses on the West Virginia side are being put in place. The span on the West Virginia side was torn out during the spring flood.

Condemnation proceedings to obtain land necessary for construction of the new railroad bridge spanning Winchester road were taken up in the circuit court here today, before a jury, by the State roads commission, through William C. Walsh and Richard Wertheimer, attorneys. The proceedings were against Charles E. Martz, owner of the land; Frederick Martz, mortgagee, and McClellan Kifer, tenant. They contended Martz objected to a reasonable offer.

Work has been started on a concrete structure to replace the wooden bridge that carries the tracks of the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad over Winchester road. A portion of the Martz property is needed for approaches to the new bridge.

Midshipman Is Denied Maryland Citizenship

Baltimore, May 25 (AP).—A young naval officer who became 21 years old while a student at the Naval Academy is not a resident of Maryland for voting purposes, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor ruled today.

The academy, he said, is Federal territory, and therefore the student did not come of age while a Maryland resident. If he had been living on Maryland soil, he automatically would become a Maryland citizen, he added.

O'Conor made his ruling at the request of W. C. Coughlin, judge of elections in the Sixth District of Anne Arundel County.

Surviving are four sons, James M. and William W. Torbert, both of this city; Frank P. Torbert, Metuchen, N. J., and Neville S. Torbert, Beltsville, Md., and four daughters, Miss Jessie D. Torbert, Miss Suda Torbert, and Miss Annie R. Torbert, all of this city, and Mrs. Clarke Conway, Bethesda, Md.

Dr. E. M. Lewis Funeral Today In Durham, N.H.

Head of New Hampshire U. Was Father of Takoma Park Resident.

Funeral services for Dr. Edward Morgan Lewis, 63, president of the University of New Hampshire since 1927 and father of Edward W. Lewis, of 223 Willow street Takoma Park, Md., will be held today in Durham, N. H. Burial will be in Durham.

Dr. Lewis died Saturday night at his home in Durham, where he has been confined since an operation last January. He had been ill for two years.

A native of Machynlleth, North Wales, Dr. Lewis came to this country as a boy. He worked his way through Willims College, from which he was graduated in 1896, and received his M. A. from Harvard College in 1899.

He gained fame as a college pitcher, and later joined professional baseball, playing with the Boston National from 1896 until 1900. He coached the Harvard baseball team from 1897 until1901.

Starting his career as an instructor at Williams College in 1903, he later went to Massachusetts State College, to become first professor of literature, then dean, and finally president; in 1927 he went to Durham as president of New Hampshire University, where he has been ever since.

Father Saves Children When Fire Burns Home

Staunton, Va., May 25 (AP).—L. E. Killian carried his four small children, the oldest 10, from his blazing home here last night. The dwelling was destroyed.

Mrs. Killian and an infant child were not at home at the time. Leaping from his bed after smelling smoke, Killian found the entire first floor ablaze.

Supreme Court Kills Municipal Bankrupt Act

Another New Deal Law Held Unconstitutional in 5-to-4 Decision.

Justice Cardozo said there was nothing in the law under consideration to dislocate the balance between the powers of the States and those of the central government. He pointed out that no action could be taken except on voluntary petition of the Government unit involved.

State Consent.

"Sufficient reasons do not appear for excluding political subdivisions from the bankruptcy jurisdiction if the jurisdiction is so exerted as to maintain the equilibrium between State and national power."

He pointed out that even with the taxing limitations in the Constitution, the Federal Government may tax a State if the State consents. He held that the same rule applies to bankruptcy proceedings.

"If voluntary bankruptcies are anathema for governmental units," he said, "municipalities and creditors have been caught in a vise from which it is impossible to let them out. Experience makes it certain that generally there will be at least a small minority of creditors who will resist a composition, however fair and reasonable, if the law does not subject them to a pressure to obey the general will."

Referring to the purposes of the law, Justice Cardozo said:

"To hold that this purpose must be thwarted by the courts because of a supposed affront to the dignity of a State, though the State disclaims the affront and is doing all it can to keep the law alive, is to make dignity a doubtful blessing. Not by arguments so divorced from the realities of life has the bankruptcy power been brought to the present state of its development during the century and a half of our national existence."

The court handed down seven opinions yesterday, leaving only two cases undecided. One of them involves constitutionality of the New York law fixing minimum wages for women and children.

In one of yesterday's opinions the court held that Secretary Wallace had not given officials of the Kansas City stockyards adequate hearing and overruled the Agriculture Department's attempt to reduce rates at the yards.

Upholds Railway.

In a 6-to-3 ruling the court held that the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railway Co. had not violated the Interstate Commerce act by carrying products of other United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries.

The court refused to review a decision in New York, which denied a Swiss corporation the right to keep $1,250,000 in gold in this country. The gold must be turned over to the Government in exchange for currency.

Arizona's permission to sue California and five other States for a final determination of water rights on the Colorado River was denied.

The Government asked the court to refuse to pass on the suit of Robert A. Taft, son of the former President, to compel the United States to pay him $1.07 in gold. Taft is attempting to collect on a $50 gold bond and seeking to set aside gold legislation.

Next Monday will be the last opinion day before adjournment for the summer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 25.—Fire, believed to have started by a carelessly thrown match or cigarette, today destroyed the single span that remained of the Point of Rocks Bridge after the Potomac River flood of last March. The fire was difficult to control because of the amount of debris loged against the span during the flood. State roads commission officials will inspect the structure tomorrow to determine the amount of damage.

in a Society Brand TROPICAL it's the SKY-BREEZE LINING

The day they build air-conditioning systems right into a man's suit will be a great day, indeed. But until that great day comes a Society Brand Tropical with the famous SKY-BREEZE lining will give you the next best thing to a built-in air-conditioning system. The SKY-BREEZE lining is a cool, porous, mesh-like fabric that stands between you and the heat of summer. Tropical worsteds and wool crashes in Society Brand's best styling traditions.
